Keenan Seeks Flavored Cigarette Ban

By SCOTT JACKSON

With the number of middle and high school students vaping on the rise, Sen. John Keenan has proposed a statewide ban on the sale of flavored cigarettes and restricting the sale of other flavored tobacco products to smoking bars.

Keenan, a Quincy Democrat, introduced a bill that would do just that earlier this year. Rep. Danielle Gregoire, a Marlborough Democrat, introduced the same legislation in the House of Representatives.

City officials are aiming to replace the seawall between Adams Shore and Houghs Neck in two phases.

Councillors Seek Additional Mitigation From T

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors on Monday pressed MBTA officials to consider additional measures to mitigate the impact of the removal of half the parking spaces at the North Quincy Red Line station and the ongoing renovation project at Wollaston station.

Councillors suggested the T establish a shuttle service between North Quincy and Squantum Point Park, increase service on a bus line that runs from Quincy Center to Squantum, and discount parking rates at Quincy Adams.

Representatives from the transit agency and the state Department of Transportation appeared before a meeting of the City Council's oversight committee on Monday; 15 officials from the two state agencies were in attendance. The committee, which includes all nine councillors, spent nearly two-and-a-half hours discussing the MBTA projects during Monday's meeting.

The T is in the midst of investing more $1.3 billion

Ayers: MBTA Commuters Deserve More Reliable Options

The MBTA recently held a public meeting to unveil plans for the construction project at the North Quincy Station, which begins this week.

After attending this meeting and hearing from concerned residents, one thing is clear: the MBTA has not done enough to provide sensible mitigation options for commuters. Fortunately for the MBTA, the answer is right in front of their eyes – they must take this opportunity to invest in a ferry service from Squantum Point Park.

Other Red Line stations in Quincy are under major construction, with Wollaston shut down until at least the fall. Now, with the North Quincy project, 600 much-

Sen. Keenan Encourages Commuters' Feedback

Wants To Hear From MBTA Riders With Their Concerns

By SCOTT JACKSON

Sen. John Keenan encouraged commuters who encounter problems amid ongoing work at the five Red Line stations in Quincy and Braintree to reach out to his office with their concerns.

Construction of a new garage at the North Quincy station – the first part of a mixed-use development there – began last week. The MBTA closed 600 parking spaces in the parking lot on the Hancock Street side of the facility to make way for the new garage; 600 spaces remain open at the station, including ones on Newport Avenue.

Wollaston station has been closed since January 2018 and is set to re-open this August. T officials have said more than 400 spaces are available at Wollaston and have encouraged riders to park there and ride a free shuttle bus to Quincy Center or North Quincy while the North Quincy garage is being built.

The T is also renovating the garages at Quincy Adams and Braintree stations, and is wrapping up the demolition of the Quincy Center garage. The transit agency is also in the process of procuring an entire new fleet of Red Line cars and installing new signals, which will allow trains to run on a more frequent basis.

Keenan said the South Shore would have a brand new Red Line once all the work, which totals $911 million, is complete.

"We'll have all-new signalization on the Red Line. A brand-new fleet of Red Line cars that will be able to operate to the full extent of that signalization," Keenan said in a recent interview. "We will have a new parking garage at North Quincy, a transit-oriented development at North Quincy, a completely reconstructed Wollaston station that won't be subject to flooding and will be ADA-compliant and that will be a state-of-the-art station from a security standpoint.

"The Quincy Center garage has been taken down after many years of discussion. That makes that site ready for development, which should occur presumably after the North Quincy one. But even if occurs while North Quincy is going on, because there is no parking there now, parking is not an issue. And we will have 40 years of life added on to the garages at Quincy Adams and Braintree, so that we don't have a repeat of what happened at Quincy Center.

"It will be a brand-new Red Line, so we should do everything we can to make that happen as quickly as possible while minimizing as best as possible the disruptions the commuters have to face, and that has been the challenge."

Keenan said residents should reach out to his office with their concerns about the MBTA, a position he expressed during a Feb. 6 community meeting on the North Quincy project.

"We have played the role of pushing the MBTA to listen to the riders' issues, listen to the people of Quincy's issues, and to be more responsive. We've built a good relationship with them and, as I said at the public hearing, we push, they'll sometimes push back, and there is still progress being made on it," Keenan said.

Residents can contact his office by phone at 617-722-1494 or by email at john.keenan@masenate.gov.

Some residents at the meeting on the North Quincy project criticized the T's decision to start that work now; they suggested the project should wait until Wollaston re-opens.

Keenan said the T wanted to start the 18-month garage project now because delaying it to the summer would mean the construction would take place during two full winters – instead of the rest of this winter, which has been mild, and next winter.

"The MBTA wants to be able to get this project done knowing this winter is essentially, hopefully done, but disruptions will be pretty much minimal from this point on to get it done over 18 months where you only have exposure to one winter," Keenan said.

Funding, he added, is available for all these projects now and should be taken advantage of.

"My position has been we've got $911 million being invested in the Red Line right now," Keenan said. "That's not to say that money would disappear if the North Quincy project is delayed, but the funding is there, so let's move these projects as best we can and bring a much better, much improved, modern Red Line to the South Shore as soon as we can."

He noted the North Quincy project has been in the pipeline for several years. The MBTA Fiscal and Management Control Board awarded the developers – Atlantic Development and Bozzuto Development – rights to the project in April 2016. The City Council approved new zoning rules for the station in November of that year and voted the next month allow the T to enter into a lease for the air rights at the site. The Quincy Planning Board began reviewing the project in January 2017 and gave its approval that June.

Keenan said parking has been the chief concern for his constituents relative to the North Quincy project. The T, he said, is confident enough commuters will begin parking at Wollaston station – where parking rates have been cut from $5 to $2 until the station re-opens – that additional mitigation measures won't be needed.

"They believe there should be enough parking because Wollaston station, up until this week, might have had 15 to 20 cars parking there," Keenan said of the MBTA. "They think those people who used to drive to Wollaston station to get on the train there and head into Boston, when the station closed started driving to North Quincy where there was excess parking capacity there, and when that capacity is now limited, those who made that switch will go back to Wollaston."

Quincy Planners Meet With Congressman Lynch

City of Quincy Principal Planners Melissa Horr Pond and Elizabeth Manning took part in the National Community Development Association (NCDA) Legislative, Policy and Professional Development Conference held recently in Washington, D.C.

During the conference, Congressman Stephen Lynch's office hosted an opportunity for Massachusetts planners to discuss local impacts on the partial federal government shutdown, which lasted for 35 days, from Dec. 22 – Jan. 25. The discussion with Cong. Lynch included impacts on community development and homelessness assistance funding.

Among the number of shutdown impacts discussed, some included the squeeze on food banks and other public services, as well as the vulnerability of those who receive federal vouchers to pay rent for housing and the potential for evictions which would increase homelessness.

For Fiscal Year 2018, Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funding served more than 65,000 beneficiaries in Quincy with $2.8 million, and "HOME" funding created 10 new affordable housing units with just over $550,000. Some of the programs and projects funded included scholarship programs for childcare and camp programs, youth activities, food banks, and financial support to an addiction treatment facility in Wollaston.

Also at the conference, Melissa Horr Pond presented a plenary session about effective strategies for National Community Development Week -- a campaign to promote the effectiveness and success of CDBG and HOME, which are both funding sources from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

NCDA connects and equips community development professionals from across the country who administer CDBG and other HUD programs. The sold out conference was the largest Winter Meeting the organization has had in its 50-year history.

School Committee Honors Project 351 Ambassadors

By TOM GORMAN

Sterling Middle School grade 8 student Collincia Agyapomaa had a heartfelt experience while volunteering at Boston's Cradles to Crayons, packing donated clothes for disadvantaged children.

"I saw how some kids didn't have what I have," she said. "They didn't have clothes and things like I have. I felt very good packing things to help them."

Collincia was one of five middle school students who represented Quincy as ambassadors at the annual Project 351 Launch Day ceremony on Jan. 19. The students were recently honored by the school committee for their participation in the statewide program.

The other students were: Abigail Coughlin, Atlantic Middle School; Mallory Rimovitz, Broad Meadows Middle School; Madeline Baryza, Central Middle School; and Isabella Carinci, Point Webster Middle School.

They were selected to serve as ambassadors by their teachers.

Broad Meadows Middle School Principal Dan Gilbert said that an eighth-grade student from each of the city's middle schools was chosen to serve as ambassadors. The students joined their state counterparts during a kickoff ceremony at Faneuil Hall and then fanned out to perform community service projects at various sites in Boston.

Gilbert explained that Project 351 was started in 2011 by then Gov. Deval Patrick as a way for middle school students to develop leadership and community service skills.

"For the past nine years, at least one representative from every one of the 351 towns in the Commonwealth sent an ambassador to learn those skills," Gilbert said.

BOLD! BIG! MORE!

The jewelry trends for the upcoming year are certainly not for the faint of heart. You will be noticed! The definitive statement seems to be "more is more." Bold necklaces such as complex gold medallions set with multi-colored mixed gemstones are the perfect complement to trending minimalist clothing styles. Charm-style earrings with letters and monograms set with pavé diamonds are popular on the runways, and chunky gold signet rings are making a huge comeback. The bigger the better, especially on the pinky finger. Stacking and layering of different materials, textures, and stones seems to be the way to go for rings, necklaces, and bracelets. Pile it on, mix it up, and express yourself.

Treat yourself or someone special with an eye-catching creation from Rogers Jewelry. From bold necklaces to gold earrings to sparkling diamonds, our primary concern is to provide our customers with the highest quality jewelry whatever their style preferences. Tax Time – And Tax-Related ID Theft

By LT. DAN MINTON

Quincy Police Crime Prevention

An identity thief may attempt to use your Social Security number (SSN) to get a tax refund or a job. This is tax-related identity theft. You may not know it has happened until the IRS sends you a letter by mail saying they have received a suspicious tax return that uses your SSN, or you try to efile your return but it's rejected as a duplicate because a return already has been filed using your SSN.

If the IRS sends you a letter, follow the instructions in the letter, followed by a visit to IdentityTheft.gov to report the identity theft to both the IRS and the FTC and get a recovery plan.

Here's what happens: If someone uses your SSN to file for a tax refund before you do, IRS records will show that someone else has already filed and gotten a refund. If you file by mail, the IRS will send you a notice or letter in the mail saying that more than one return was filed for you. If you try to efile, the IRS will reject your tax return as a duplicate filing.

If someone uses your SSN to get a job, the employer may report that person's income to the IRS using your SSN. When you file your tax return, you wouldn't have included those earnings. IRS records will show you failed to report all your income. The agency will send you a notice saying you had wages that you didn't report. The IRS doesn't know those wages were reported by an employer you don't know, for work performed by someone else.

IRS notices about tax-related identity theft are sent by mail. The IRS doesn't:

- Initiate contact with a taxpayer by sending an email, text, or social media message that asks for personal or financial information.

- The IRS also does not call taxpayers with threats of lawsuits or arrests.

- The IRS will never ask you to wire money, pay with a gift card or prepaid debit card, or share your credit card information over the phone.

If you get an email, text, or other electronic message that claims to be from the IRS, do not reply or click on any links. Instead, forward it to phishing@irs.gov, and report IRS imposters to the US Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration at tigta.gov.

Dealing With Tax-Related Identity Theft

If the IRS sends you a notice or letter saying that someone used your SSN to get a tax refund, or saying there's another problem, respond quickly and follow the instructions in the letter. Call the IRS using the telephone number given in the letter. You'll need the letter and a copy of your prior year's tax return when you call to help verify your identity. Visit the IRS's guide, IRS Identity Theft Victim Assistance: How It Works, for more information.

If you think someone used your SSN to file for a tax refund, but you have not received a letter from the IRS, use IdentityTheft.gov to report it to the IRS and FTC and get a recovery plan.

Visit IdentityTheft.gov to complete an IRS Identity Theft Affidavit (IRS Form 14039) and submit it to the IRS online so that the IRS can begin resolving your case. You'll also be reporting the identity theft to the FTC. File your tax return, and pay any taxes you owe. If you can't efile your tax return, you may need to mail a paper return.

If approved, Keenan's bill will ban the sale of flavored cigarettes by any retailer or individual in the state. The sale of other flavored tobacco products – including cigars, little cigars, chewing tobacco, pipe tobacco, snuff, and electronic cigarettes, cigars, and hookah, regardless of nicotine content – would be restricted to licensed smoking bars. Products approved by the Food and Drug Administration as tobacco-cessation products or other medical uses would be exempt from the new rule.

Keenan said he sought a similar ban last year when lawmakers approved raising the age to purchase all tobacco products, including those used for vaping, from 18 to 21. His new bill to that effect was introduced in January at the start of the new legislative term.

In a recent interview, Keenan cited increased rates of vaping among teenagers for proposing the restriction on flavored tobacco products. The FDA in 2018 found the number of high school students using e-cigarettes – defined by use on at least one day in the past 30 days – increased 78 percent, from 11.7 to 20.8 percent, between 2017 and 2018. The number of middle schoolers using e-cigarettes rose by 48 percent over the same period to 4.9 percent of all middle school students.

"The significant rise in e-cigarette use among both student populations has resulted in overall tobacco product use increases of 38 percent among high school students and 29 percent among middle school students between 2017 and 2018," the FDA said.

Keenan said those numbers show something more needs to be done to stop e-cigarette use among teens.

"I made a decision, given what I'm hearing and given what the stats show, that we've got to do something about it," Keenan said.

"It's the tobacco play-book – the cigarette play-book – all over. I firmly believe they are targeting young people. When you look at 78 percent increase in high school students using vaping products and 48 percent in middle school students – which is a million and a half young people per year – using tobacco products, everything that the federal, state and local governments have worked on relative to getting tobacco use among young people to decline, it's just gone."

"That was a huge success," Keenan said of previous anti-tobacco efforts. "Tobacco rates were declining pretty dramatically the last 15, 20 years, and then all of a sudden along comes vaping; children having the perception that it's not dangerous."

"The manufacturers play this cute game of saying it can be used to help people that are smoking, and yet they chose not to be regulated as a smoking-cessation device."

"They are out there. They've got these products they're advertising hugely on social media – the flavored tobacco products. Kids are using them. Those are the stats. And anecdotally I hear from my son and his friends that it's everywhere. Kids are using these products."

"It's highly addictive – more addictive than cigarettes depending on the nicotine product you put in your vape cartridge."

Even after increasing the legal age to purchase tobacco products to 21, Keenan said he expects teens would still be able to acquire e-cigarettes and flavor pods through straw buyers.

"My expectation is that kids will find older siblings and friends to purchase the devices and the tobacco products for them, and the use will continue to rise," he said.

There is a perception out there that e-cigarettes are safer than traditional cigarettes, Keenan added, though that has not been proven.

"They don't think it's dangerous," he said. "They're not smoking – they're vaping – and their perception is it's not dangerous to draw vape into your lungs. It doesn't smell like tobacco. It doesn't taste like tobacco. It's fruity flavored. Nobody seems to be incredibly upset about it. They can hide it more easily...than if they were smoking a cigarette. The use has just gone through the roof."

"And for a long time parents didn't even know what was going on. When I was a kid, your parents could tell you were smoking because they could smell it."

The ban on flavored cigarettes would apply to mentholated ones as well, Keenan said. He said people – children and adults – can perceive menthol cigarettes as healthy because menthol is used in products, such as cough drops and ointments, that treat respiratory ailments.

"A lot of people view menthol as a favored flavor, particularly among adults, and children view menthol as something that is healthy. When you have a cough, you take a menthol cough drop. They don't view it as dangerous and they find it enticing," Keenan said.

"I knew somebody who smoked who had asthma. This was years ago. I said why do you smoke? 'Well, it's menthol.' People still have that perception because it's in cough drops."

Keenan said he would work with Gregoire, the House member who filed similar legislation, to get the bill passed. Keenan believes there is support for the measure on Beacon Hill and said he would work to ensure it is a top priority for lawmakers.

"I think if you asked most [legislators] they would probably say yes, it should be banned," he said. "When push comes to shove and this makes its way through the legislative process, will it be a priority is the question. We're going to work hard to make it a priority."

In addition, Keenan plans to work with students to get the bill passed. He noted Sarah Ryan, a student from Holbrook, which he represents on Beacon Hill, spoke out against the increased use of e-cigarettes among students in a letter to The New York Times last month.

"We're going to bring a lot of attention to it," Keenan said of his bill. "We're going to work with students. Holbrook, which is in my district, has been out front on this issue. A young woman down there named Sarah Ryan had an op-ed in The New York Times."

"So young people are interested in this issue, they see what's going on, so we're going to partner with them as well."

Scenes From Yesterday

Bird St., Looking West, Quincy, Mass.

THIS POST CARD of Bird Street in Houghs Neck was postmarked in 1930, but it was published in 1920 - almost 100 years ago. Taken from near what is today's Edgewater Drive, the view is towards Macy Street, which crosses about six houses down. At the time of this picture, most of the cottages in Houghs Neck were still summer residences. Most of those shown here have been somewhat altered over the years, some to gain a better advantage of their water views, but all are now year-round houses.

The one on the right has been replaced. The street looks pretty narrow here and this section of Bird Street was accepted by the city in 1934. What appears to be a street across the foreground is misleading. This is one of a series of black and white Houghs Neck picture postcards that were artistically altered by the publisher, Charles A. Litchfield who lived in Merrymount.

Family Of Christopher McCallum Overwhelmed By Community's Love, Support, Generosity, Kindness

On behalf of my husband, Chris McCallum our sons, Ryan, Michael and Christopher and the McCallum and Doyle families, I would like to thank the many friends and residents of Quincy for your overwhelming love and support following our tragic loss in Squantum.

Four weeks ago Chris was taken from our family and no words can ever capture the pain of our loss. The outpouring of support from Quincy where Chris and I grew up and first met has blown us away and is a tribute to how Chris lived his life and the impact he had on those fortunate enough to have met him. Chris would truly be humbled by the love and caring you have bestowed on our family and we will never be able to thank you all enough for your unbelievable generosity and kindness!

The Quincy community has been like a warm blanket of comfort during this difficult time and we will be forever grateful! The article in the Feb. 21st edition of the Quincy Sun did such a great job of reflecting the type of person Chris was to all he had the opportunity to meet and we were touched by the words conveyed. We remain optimistic that the State Police investigation will be able to bring some measure of justice for our loss and we pray that the person or persons responsible are held accountable for their actions. Please continue to share information to assist with the on-going investigation. Thank you all from the bottom of our hearts.

I was very fortunate that when I was state representative, Martin Luther King, Jr., spoke to the House of Representatives and after he spoke I went up and shook his hand and had a nice conversation with him.

When the University of Massachusetts basketball team was in the playoffs, I travelled to Atlanta, Georgia, to see them play and my daughter was living in Atlanta at the time and met me to attend the game. She asked if there was any place in Atlanta I would like to visit and I indicated I wanted to visit the Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial.

I did visit the wonderful memorial and while I was there I purchased two pictures: one of Martin Luther King, Jr. and one of Mahatma Ghandi, which both still hang in my law office to this day.

Hospital Director Says He Is Not Resigning

The Board of Managers at the Quincy Hospital wants to meet with City Manager William J. Deegan, Jr. to iron out differences between him and the director, according to a statement by Chairman August E. Settimelli.

Hospital Director Dr. Ensio K.F. Ronka said, "I haven't resigned and I have no intention of resigning."

According to Settimelli's statement, the board spent considerable time discussing Deegan's letter published last week, in which he said that he expected the hospital director to maintain the institution on an improved basis on funds provided by the city council.

Members of the board, in addition to the chairman include Mrs. Esther C. Boling, George W. Arbuckle, William J. Martin and J. Brooks Keyes.

FIREMAN SEEK RAISE TO POLICE LEVEL, POLICE ASK UNIFORM REIMBURSEMENT

Quincy firefighters asked for a $200 raise to bring their pay on par with police salaries and police asked the city to buy their uniforms, during the finance session when the council considered the budgets of the two departments. Captain William Curtin represented the firefighters while Patrolman Kenneth Poulin spoke for the police.

Both Finance Committee Chairman Frank N. Orcutt and Mayor Thomas S. Burgin explained that it has been agreed upon to omit these requests from the budget and to give them serious consideration after the final budget figures had been worked out. At that time the Council will be in a better position to determine whether or not the requests of the two uniformed departments can be met, he said.

RUNAWAY FIRE TRUCK HALTED

BY ALERT PAIR AT HOUGHS NECK BLAZE

An alert policeman and a bystander stopped a runaway fire truck as it rolled down a hill at a Houghs Neck fire, saving some 30 persons, most of them children, from injury. Patrolman James A.D. MacKay and James E. Cotter of 209 Winthrop St., Houghs Neck, leaped aboard and braked the rolling apparatus before it reached the onlookers who had gathered to watch firemen battle the blaze that routed six persons and an infant. The fire truck, Hose Two, attached to the Houghs Neck Station, slipped its brakes while parked on a steep, icy incline on Winthrop St., opposite 28 Parkhurst St., the home of Lloyd Dunn, 26, and the scene of the fire.

Science Saturday - Flight With Paper Airplanes

This month we'll be exploring flight with paper airplanes on Saturday, March 9th at 10 a.m. Half of the room will be for building your planes and the other half will be for flight testing. We'll have plenty of ideas for different plane models and ways to change them, but then it's up to you to experiment! How far, how high, how fast can you make your plane go? Can you make it do tricks like loops and rolls? We'll even have a few planes already made so you can just experiment.

This program is suggested for families with children ages 3 and older. No registration is required.

Mike the Bubble Man

Who doesn't love bubbles? Join Mike the Bubble Man on Tuesday, March 12th at 2 p.m. when he brings magic and science to the stage with his interactive show about bubbles. Humanoid chickens and neurotic robots are shocking enough as new experiences go, but Zita is even more surprised to find herself taking on the role of intergalactic hero.

Pick up a copy of Zita the Spacegirl at the main library children's desk to read before our meeting.

The Phoenix Book Club for children in grades 5-8 meets on the second Tuesday of each month to discuss a variety of books. The Club will meet on March 12th at 7 p.m. at the Main Library.

The most well-known children's literature awards are the Newbery and Caldecott medals, but those aren't the only ones. This month we'll be reading books that have won the Newbery, Caldecott, Coretta Scott King, Batchelder, Sibert, Schneider, and Belpre awards in the past several years. Pick an award winner and decide for yourself if you think it deserved to win.

Too busy to join us this month? Stop by the library anytime to find out what

'Stained Glass Sky' Art Exhibit

During the month of March, Dedham artist Kira Seamon will display her paintings in the Wotiz Gallery at the Milton Public Library.

Pursuing her passion for visual art with a cell phone, Seamon transforms scenes of New England foliage into brilliant images of dazzling beauty. The award-winning ballet dancer turned photographer attaches a kaleidoscopic lens to her cell phone to "recombine pictures of branches, leaves and flowers into fascinating shapes and colors reminiscent of stained glass."

In Seamon's widely traveling exhibit, "Stained Glass Sky," previously displayed at several other Massachusetts libraries, her 40 photos are like Rorschach ink blots that inflame viewers' imaginations. Seen through her kaleidoscopic lens, a winterberry bush seems ablaze with patterns of incandescent colors suggestive of Impressionist landscapes. In another, the branches and leaves of a Norway maple tree are duplicated in symmetrical patterns of vivid oranges and yellows. As photographed by Seamon, the buds and blades of a bearded iris are reflected in a symmetrical mosaic of

Robert Chambers Appointed Associate Vice President Berkelee College Of Music

Berklee College of Music has appointed Robert Chambers of Quincy as associate vice president of community and government relations.

In his new role, he will oversee the development and management of the institutional relationships, partnerships, and programs with community organizations; city, state and federal governmental affairs; and efforts that contribute to the cultural, educational, and artistic development of the Boston area.

Prior to Berklee, Chambers was the legislative director for the state's House Ways and Means committee where he served as the liaison to the 200 legislative members, as well as other administration offices. He was a pivotal member of the committee that crafted the state's $42 billion budget for FY19.

"It's unlike any experience I have ever had," says the former political aide. Throughout the process we were guided by the Chairman's belief that "This budget meets people where they're at in their lives, and supports the most vulnerable amongst us." It was truly an honor to serve the Commonwealth in that capacity.

His previous positions include his role as chief of staff for the president of Cambridge College, and a two-year stint as vice president and Dean of Students at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston (SMFA). He also worked at the Massachusetts College of Art and Design (MassArt) for 17 years, where he had the opportunity to work in various positions within Student Affairs before transitioning to the president's office as the Assistant to the President for Government and Community Affairs. During his tenure at MassArt, Chambers, with the leadership of the president, established the office of Government and Community Relations, which he led in its first six years.

Having held key leadership roles in higher education and politics over the years, he was fortunate to have crossed paths with several people who worked at Berklee and spoke highly of the institutional culture.

"Working around students, especially creative students who are so passionate and driven by what they do, I find very energizing. So, that was another factor in my decision to pursue this opportunity," says Chambers.

Chambers has been an active member and held leadership positions in several organizations, including the Boston Arts Academy Board of Trustees, the South Shore YMCA of Massachusetts, Mission Hill Neighborhood Housing Services Board, and the Fenway Alliance Board.

Chambers holds a bachelor's degree in general studies with an emphasis in psychology and business from Southeast Missouri State University.

WHAT'S COOKING

with Marie & Susie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUSIE FALCO

Mac 'n' Cheese Extraordinaire

By MARIE

There must be dozens of ways to make macaroni and cheese – always a very popular favorite. I certainly have made my share and tried many variations of the recipe.

My neighbor Janet's macaroni and cheese recipe could win a prize for being so rich in texture and flavor. Sometimes when she makes it she sends me over a helping and it is always still bubbly even after I put it in the microwave.

So I asked her for her secret recipe to share with you and here it is – and now you know why this dish is so delicious.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees, lightly grease a baking dish

RECIPE

1 pound ziti or rigatoni (she used rigatoni)

½ pound Swiss cheese
½ provolone cheese (or whatever cheese that you like)
1 block of extra sharp cheese (6 or 8 ounces)
½ pound sliced American cheese
Grated Romano or parmesan for top salt and pepper to taste
Whole milk (as much as you need)

Directions: Cut all of the cheeses in small square pieces, and cook the pasta al dente. Drain pasta and put back in pot. Add all of the cut of cheese and mix well.

Place in a ceramic baking or glass dish and add salt, pepper and grated cheese over top. Then slowly pour milk over it until covered and you can just start to see it the milk coming to the top.

Add a single layer of American cheese on top cook until golden brown and top is bubbly about an hour.

Strawberry Chia Pudding

By SUSIE

In a serving of chia seeds (about 2 tablespoons), you get about 12 grams of carbohydrates, 11 grams of fiber (which helps keep blood sugar at an even keel), 9 grams of healthy fat, and 4.5 grams protein. They also contain all nine amino acids in proper ratios and are a great alternative for vegetarians, since they are considered a complete protein.

A serving contains 18 percent of the RDA for calcium (for healthy bones), 27% RDA for phosphorus (also important for bones, teeth as well as cellular structure) 30 % for manganese (also important for proper bone formation as well as skin integrity), as well as zinc (important for immune function and hormone balance) and copper (necessary for healthy skin, hair, and helps with the formation of hemoglobin).

They are rich in omega 3 fatty acids which are needed for various important functions, including but not limited to warding off cancers and arthritis, heart disease, and are imperative for brain health and even mood stabilization.

STRAWBERRY CHIA PUDDING

16 ounces fresh strawberries, hulled
1 ½ cups (or one 13 ½-ounce can) coconut milk
¼ cup raw honey, or to taste

1 teaspoon vanilla
¾ teaspoon finely grated lime zest
½ cup chia seeds

Place the strawberries, coconut milk, honey, vanilla, and lime zest in a blender and blend until smooth. Taste and add more honey if desired.

Place the chia seeds in a large bowl, pour the strawberry mixture on top, and whisk thoroughly. Let stand for 10 minutes and whisk again.

Cover and refrigerate for at least 4 hours and up to 3 days. Stir the pudding before serving. The longer it sits, the thicker the pudding will become; if you find that it is too thick, whisk in a little water (or coconut water, if you have some on hand).

'The Only Woman In The Room' - By Marie Benedict

'The Fine Print' Book Review

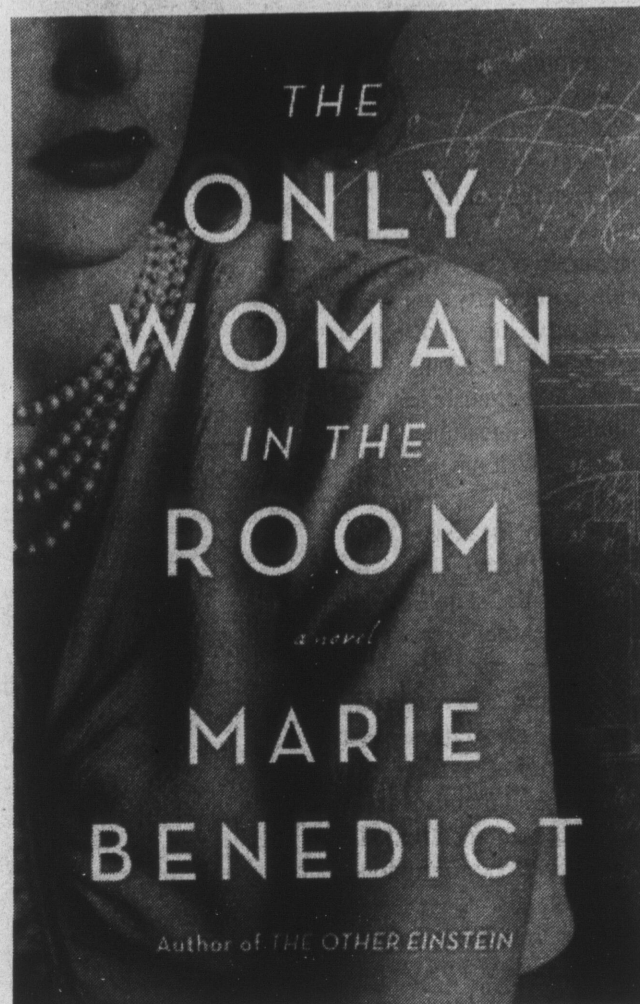

By BETH VACCA

I love historical fiction. There is something about personal stories in the midst of an historical event that makes those events become more real to me. More alive. Learning the stories of people, either fictional or actual, living through a period of history somehow impresses upon me the gravity of the events that happened. To read the facts and data is one thing, to be able to live the event through the eyes of another is quite different.

Looking back to the history classes I sat through as a student I probably would have understood so much more of what took place if I had read this genre alongside my history books. To be able to see history through the eyes of people and not as just words on a page was a skill I did not possess in my youth.

"The Only Woman in the Room" by Marie Benedict is the story of the woman known to the world as Hedy Lemarr, Hollywood star. She was known for her beautifully symmetrical features, her raven hair and her green eyes. She knew how to work a room. The room however, no matter what room she was in, did not know her.

Born in Vienna, Austria she gave up her burgeoning acting career to marry a powerful and politically minded man whom she decided might be able to keep her family safe in the increasingly unstable climate as Hitler rose to power. As a trophy wife often kept in the room while deals were made and issues discussed it was assumed that all such discussions were beyond her reach. Beautiful young Hedy was just a pretty face.

As a society we have come a long way from where we were during Ms. Lemarr's time. In some areas, however, we haven't come all that far. Timely written as the recent "Me too" movement has brought new awareness to the gender differences that still plague our culture, The Only Woman In the Room, reminds us the struggle is not new.

This is one story of how an incredibly intelligent woman used her personal knowledge and intellect to solve a problem that needed solving. This is one story of how an incredibly intelligent woman's ideas were dismissed because she was a woman. This is the story of the woman who patented an invention that became the foundation of a device most of us couldn't live without the modern cell phone.

I love to read. This book, however, may have just inspired me to go and watch a few old movies. I want to see Ms. Lemarr in action. This book has also caused me to wish for many things. I wish my niece's wax museum project was this year instead of last year.

I wish that Ms. Lemarr was still with us so that she could tour our schools and speak of her life to our next generations of young men and women. And I wish this book would become required reading in our schools. Don't forget to read The Fine Print.

Skin Infection Cellulitis Can Be Serious

A Message From Ruth Jones, Director Of Nursing, Quincy Health Dept.

RUTH JONES

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Cellulitis is a common, potentially serious bacterial skin infection, where the affected skin appears swollen and red and is typically painful and warm to the touch. Cellulitis typically affects the skin on the lower legs, but it can occur on the face, arms and other areas and happens when a crack or break in your skin allows bacteria to enter. If left untreated, the infection can spread to your lymph nodes and bloodstream and quickly become life-threatening. It isn't usually spread from person to person.

Symptoms

Possible signs and symptoms of cellulitis, which usually occur on one side of the body, include:

- Red area of skin that tends to expand or streak
- Swelling
- Tenderness
- Pain
- Warmth
- Fever
- Red spots
- Blisters
- Skin dimpling
- Leaking of yellow, clear fluid or pus

It's important to identify and treat cellulitis promptly because the condition can spread rapidly throughout your body.

See your doctor, preferably that day, if:

- You have a rash that's red, swollen, tender and warm and it's expanding, but you do not have a fever.

Go to the emergency room if you have any of the following:

- High fever or chills
- Nausea and vomiting
- Enlarging or hardening of the reddened area
- You have a red, swollen, tender rash or a rash that's changing rapidly
- Increased pain
- Numbness of the area when touched
- Other medical problems that may be affected by an infection.

Causes

Cellulitis transpires when bacteria, most commonly streptococcus and staphylococcus, enter through a crack or break in your skin. The incidence of a more severe staphylococcus infection called methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) is on the rise.

Although cellulitis can occur anywhere on your body, the most common site is the lower leg. Bacteria are most likely to enter disrupted areas of skin, such as where you've had recent surgery, cuts, puncture wounds, an ulcer, athlete's foot or dermatitis. Bacteria can also enter through areas of dry, flaky or swollen skin. Additionally, animal bites can cause cellulitis.

Risk factors

Several issues can put you at increased risk for cellulitis:

- Injury. Any cut, fracture, burn or scrape gives bacteria an entry point.
- Weakened immune system. Conditions that weaken your immune system such as, leukemia and HIV/AIDS render you more susceptible to infections. Certain medications also can weaken your immune system.
- Skin conditions. Conditions such as eczema, athlete's foot and shingles can cause breaks in the skin, which give bacteria an entry point.
- Chronic swelling of your arms or legs (lymphedema). This condition sometimes follows surgery.
- History of cellulitis. Having had cellulitis before makes you prone to develop it again.
- Obesity. Being overweight or obese increases your risk of developing cellulitis.

- Trauma to the skin
- Diabetes
- Circulatory problems, such as not enough blood flow to your arms and legs, poor drainage of your veins or lymphatic system, or varicose veins near the surface of the skin
- Liver disease such as chronic hepatitis or cirrhosis
- Foreign objects in the skin
- Bone infections underneath the skin.

Diagnosis of Cellulitis

Your healthcare provider will do a medical history and physical exam. Additional tests may include:

- A blood test if the infection is suspected to have spread to your blood
- An X-ray if there's a foreign object in the skin or the bone underneath is possibly infected
- A culture.

Treatment for Cellulitis

- Rest the area.
- Elevate the area to help reduce swelling and relieve discomfort.
- Use over-the-counter pain relievers such as acetaminophen or ibuprofen to ease the pain, as well as keep your fever down.
- Your provider may prescribe antibiotics by mouth for a week to 14 days.

Your doctor may use IV or intramuscular antibiotics if:

- The infection is severe.
- You have other medical issues.
- You are very young or elderly.
- The cellulitis covers large areas, is on your hands, or in close proximity to body parts like your eyes.
- The infection worsens even after taking antibiotics for 2 to 3 days.

Surgery for Cellulitis

Rarely, severe cases may need surgery to open and drain an abscess or pus that has collected in the tissue. It may also be necessary to cut away dead tissue to allow healing.

Complications

Recurrent occurrences of cellulitis may damage the lymphatic drainage system and cause chronic swelling of the affected limb. Rarely, the infection can disseminate into the deep layer of tissue called the fascial lining. Necrotizing fasciitis is an example of a deep-layer infection. It's considered an extreme emergency.

Prevention

If your cellulitis recurs, your doctor may recommend preventive antibiotics. To help prevent cellulitis and other infections, take these precautions when you have a skin wound:

- Wash your wound daily with soap and water. Do this gently as part of your normal bathing.
- Apply a protective cream or ointment. For most surface wounds, an over-the-counter antibiotic ointment may provide adequate protection.
- Cover your wound with a bandage. Change bandages at least daily.
- Watch for signs of infection.

fection. Redness, pain and drainage are all indications of a possible infection and the need for medical evaluation.

People with diabetes and those with poor circulation need to take extra precautions to prevent skin injury and infection.

Good skin care measures include the following:

- Inspect your feet daily. Regularly check your feet for signs of injury so you can discover infections early.
- Moisturize your skin regularly. Lubricating your skin helps prevent cracking and peeling. Do not apply moisturizer to open sores.
- Trim your fingernails and toenails carefully. Take care not to injure or cut the surrounding skin.
- Protect your hands and feet. Wear appropriate footwear and gloves.
- Promptly treat infections on the skin's surface (superficial), such as athlete's foot. Superficial skin infections can easily spread from person to person. Don't wait to start treatment.

Outlook for Cellulitis

Most people with cellulitis respond to the antibiotics in 24-72 hours and will see a noticeable improvement. In rare cases, cellulitis can spread through the bloodstream and become life-threatening.

Social Security Matters

Spousal Benefits And Enrolling In Medicare

By RUSSELL GLOOR

AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I will be 65 in March. Husband will be 61 in August. If I started collecting Social Security now would I only be able to collect on myself? My husband plans on collecting at 62. Will I be able to collect some of his when he starts collecting at age 62? Also, who can advise me about Medicare? Do I have to apply now? Signed: Needing Advice

Dear Needing: Yes, if you start your Social Security benefits now, you can only collect your own benefits - you cannot collect a spousal benefit until your husband starts collecting his benefits. Whether you will get a spousal benefit from your husband's record depends upon whether your own benefit at your full retirement age of 66 is less than 1/2 of your husband's benefit at his full retirement age (or "FRA").

If your husband will be 61 in 2019 his full retirement age for Social Security purposes is 66 and 8 months and if he starts his benefit at age 62 it will be 28.3% less than it would be at his full retirement age. If you start your benefit at age 65, it will be reduced by 6.7% from what you would get at your FRA of 66. Your spousal benefit will be based upon both of your FRA benefit amounts and, if your husband claims his benefit in August 2020 when he is 62, you will have already reached your FRA. So, if 50% of your husband's FRA benefit amount is more than your FRA benefit amount you'll get a spousal boost. But since you are taking your own benefit one year earlier than your FRA, the spousal boost will be added to your own reduced benefit amount, which means your total spousal benefit will be slightly less than half of your husband's FRA benefit amount. To summarize: you can't get a spousal benefit until your husband starts collecting his; you will only get a spousal benefit if 50% of your husband's benefit at his FRA is more than your FRA benefit amount; and your spousal benefit amount will be slightly less if you claim your own benefit one year earlier than your FRA.

Regarding Medicare, whether you need to apply now depends on your current health insurance. If you have "creditable health insurance" coverage through an employer (either your own employer or your husband's) which will continue after you are 65, you do not need to enroll in Part B or Part D at this time. You should check with the employer's Human Resource department to make sure their coverage will remain first payer now that you are Medicare eligible. If you do not now have creditable coverage you need to enroll in Medicare now. You are still in your initial enrollment period, which begins three months before the month you turn 65 and ends three months after the month you are 65. If you do not apply within this time frame and you don't have other creditable coverage you will be subject to a 10% Part B penalty (that never goes away) for each year you delay. If you apply now for your Social Security benefits to start in March, you'll be automatically enrolled in Medicare Part A (hospitalization) and Part B, but you can choose to opt out of Part B (doctors and outpatient services) as part of the application process. However, if you change your mind and decide to wait to claim your Social Security benefits and you do not have other creditable coverage, you should still enroll in Medicare during your initial enrollment period by contacting your local Social Security office or by enrolling online at www.ssa.gov. The current monthly premium for Medicare Part B is $135.50 for a married couple filing a joint income tax return with a combined income (from all sources) of $170,000 or less.

Sen. Keenan Encourages Commuters' Feedback

"It will be a disruption and inconvenient and certainly add time to their commute, but they will go back to Wollaston for $2 a day, take the quick shuttle bus up to North Quincy and then get on the train there."

"So for those who made the switch, they'll make the switch back, but there will be added commuting time."

Keenan said his office has pressed the MBTA to consider other options that might be needed, including a shuttle service between North Quincy and Squantum Point Park.

"We've encouraged [the T] to look at alternatives in case they are needed," Keenan said. "For instance, it may be necessary to run perhaps a shuttle bus from Squantum Point Park."

Squantum Point Park, which is owned by the state Department of Conservation and Recreation, is home to an 800-car parking lot. T officials told the City Council in April 2017 that a shuttle service between Squantum Point Park and North Quincy would be an option if necessary.

Quincy has partnered with the town of Winthrop in recent years to offer ferry service from Squantum Point Park to Boston and Winthrop. Keenan said it would make sense for the MBTA to offer commuter ferry service from Squantum Point Park as a mitigation measure, but the transit agency is not considering it.

"Right now, that is not part of the mitigation plan," he said. "As much as we would like it to be — as much as we're trying to encourage it — right now it is not part of the mitigation plan."

The T, he said, is concerned about the cost and logistics of putting a ferry service in place.

"I think they would tell you that the planning and the securing of a vehicle, the scheduling, finding docking spaces, is a complicated process and expensive," Keenan said. "In longer terms, getting a ferry service up and running would probably cost you less than repaving two miles of road. It's all relative."

The ridership numbers on the ferry out of Squantum Point Park haven't been strong, Keenan said, but he expects a ferry operated by the MBTA with a more favorable schedule to Quincy commuters would do better.

"One of the issues [is] when the city has partnered with the Winthrop ferry — and we've been involved in that — the numbers haven't been great out of Quincy. They have been better than the Winthrop numbers — more people [from Quincy] are riding the Winthrop ferry than people from Winthrop — but the numbers haven't been great," Keenan said.

"The reason the numbers haven't been great is the schedule isn't great. As recently as two weeks ago, we said to the T just don't look at the Winthrop ferry number and draw your conclusions based on that, because those aren't great commuting options the way they are scheduled.

"Look at the number of people that are living at Marina Bay now, the new apartments that have opened, and look at what's happening at the North Quincy train station and recognize you'd probably have a much greater ridership."

The bus shuttle that runs between Marina Bay and North Quincy station is at capacity, Keenan added; those residents who take that shuttle would likely ride the ferry if available.

"Marina Bay shuttle, which shuttles people from Marina Bay to the North Quincy train station, they're at capacity. We asked the MBTA to reach out to them to see if they're at capacity — we had heard they might be expanding it with another bus — but the word that the T got back was that they are at capacity," Keenan said.

"So there is a demand for transportation to Boston and if I lived at Marina Bay I would think it would be nicer to walk 200 yards or 100 yards, get on the ferry and be downtown within 15 minutes without having to worry about the shuttle bus to North Quincy to get on the train to South Station and connect over to the Seaport or Financial District."

As part of the mitigation package for the North Quincy project, the MBTA granted the city $2.1 million to extend Commander Shea Boulevard 1,200 feet to Squantum Point Park. Once the extension is completed this spring, the park and its parking lot will be accessible directly from Commander Shea Boulevard; presently, the only way to get there is through Marina Bay.

"The Commander Shea Boulevard extension should be completed this spring," Keenan said. "That will give direct access to the Squantum Point parking lot, so people that are coming from South Quincy, Quincy Point, Merrymount, Houghs Neck, Germantown, anywhere, if they come down Quincy Shore Drive, they would be able to take that right to the little road that leads to Commander Shea and then have a straight shot right out into the parking lot. They don't have to go into the Marina Bay access roads, around the rotary and weave their way. It would be a direct shot into the parking lot."

"Once that is done, we would be able to better position the ferry again saying, 'now we have direct access to the parking lot for commuters from Quincy and the South Shore.'"

An MBTA ferry previously ran out of the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. Keenan said ferry service was unlikely to return there in the future because more Quincy residents would likely use the ferry out of Squantum Point Park.

"The focus has been on Squantum Point Park for a whole bunch of reasons. Because it's in the north end of the city it would likely serve a greater number of Quincy residents. People have this thing about traveling backwards to go forwards and that was one of the things people always talked about when they talked about the ferry running out of the shipyard," Keenan said.

"So if you have it in North Quincy, all of Quincy can feed it into North Quincy."

The garage at North Quincy will include 852 parking spaces for MBTA riders — equivalent to the number of spaces previously available on the Hancock Street side of the facility. An additional 700 spaces will be included for residential and retail use at the station. When Wollaston re-opens in the summer, it will include roughly the same number of parking spaces that were available before the station closed in 2018.

Keenan said the MBTA opted not to increase the number of parking spaces between those two stations because there were surplus spaces before the Wollaston project began.

"When the Wollaston station was open, there were days when the parking lot was not fully utilized, or if Wollaston was fully utilized, North Quincy wasn't. Right up until the point they closed Wollaston, there was surplus parking between Wollaston station and North Quincy," Keenan said.

"Even with the ability to carry more passengers, they didn't think the demand would be that much greater. And that's not even having the conversation ultimately of a Quincy [Center] garage in place."

The MBTA, he said, would likely entertain some sort of development at Wollaston station, just like it has at North Quincy and Quincy Center.

"It could be five years, ten years, fifteen years," Keenan replied when asked if the station's lot would be developed.

"The MBTA leased out the North Quincy parking lot because they needed income and revenue. When you think about it, surface parking lots aren't your best use of land near a train station."

"If you're going to develop, in my view, you keep development out of neighborhoods, and you put it in your central business districts where there is public transportation readily available. People who live in those apartments or condominiums, instead of having two cars, may only have one, and they will use public transportation. Ideally, that type of transportation would have less impact on the quality of life citywide. That is the whole idea behind transit-oriented development."

The yearlong program began with a Launch Day where various dignitaries addressed the students about the importance of leadership and community service. Gov. Charlie Baker and newly-elected Congresswoman Ayanna Pressley were among the speakers. Students also listened to a video message from New England Patriots owner Bob Kraft.

Following the remarks, students went to various service sites including the Pine Street Inn homeless shelter, Cradles to Crayons, the Greater Boston Food Bank, the McKay School and Service Village.

Isabella Carinci served at Cradles to Crayons where she assisted other students in sorting clothes that will be distributed to children in need.

"We went through the clothes and organized them into what could be used for kids less fortunate," she said. "We ended up serving over 800 kids."

Mallory Rimovitz said

her experience at the Pine Street Inn was "very inspiring."

"We made food for them that was going to be used for their next day's meal," she said. "It made me feel good that I got to help someone."

At the McKay School, Abigail Coughlin's group painted the auditorium stage and walls and created murals in the bathrooms. She said visiting another district's school was eye-opening.

"It kind of opened my eyes to what some students go through because when I got there, it was a pretty dull environment, and I thought it would be hard to learn in," she said. "I wouldn't want to learn in that kind of environment. After [painting the walls], it was so much nicer, so I felt really proud that we made a difference."

Madeline Baryza spent the afternoon at the Service Village.

"We made cards for veterans, blankets for homeless and hygiene kits for kids," she said. "We made 500 of those kits."

The students will serve throughout the year performing various community service projects, attending special events, and learning leadership skills.

"There's so much more to come for them," Gilbert said.

According to the Project 351 website, more than 3,000 ambassadors and alumni have served more than 550,000 people since the program's inception in 2011. The concept of Project 351, which had been developed by Carolyn Casey, was initially a one-day celebration to honor the legacy of civil rights leader, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., as well as statewide unity and youth leadership.

"With Project 351's enrichment, training, and mentorship, ambassadors dedicate a year to build unity, cultivate kindness, and transform lives and communities through service,"

On Saturday, Feb. 16, at approximately 2:15 a.m., Officers Mike Reilly and Scott Doherty were dispatched to Billings Street for a disorder between a male and female outside the address. The caller was awakened by yelling and called the police.

As the officers arrived on scene, a second call came in about the disturbance, stating that there was now screaming. The officers approached the two-family home and noticed that a light was on in the upstairs unit. The officers then heard a male yelling and a female crying hysterically.

The sound was coming from the upstairs apartment but the front exterior door was locked. Officer Doherty knocked and announced, "Quincy Police!" The yelling and crying immediately stopped followed by the lights in the apartment going off. Officer Doherty shouted again, "Quincy Police - open the door!" Numerous attempts were made to get the occupants to open the door in order to check on their well being to no avail.

Patrol Supervisor/Sgt. Mike Duran, who was en route to the call, requested that the Quincy Fire Department be dispatched to assist in getting the front door open. In these cases, officers need to assure that the occupants are safe, free to leave and unharmed. They also want to determine if a crime occurred.

As the officers waited, they spent their time trying to convince the occupants to open the door and advised them that failure to comply could result in the door being forced open. The apartment remained silent and dark. As Sergeant Duran and Quincy Fire Engine 2 arrived on scene, Officer Reilly could see through the front door's windows the light to the common hallway that lit up the stairway leading to the apartment was suddenly turned off. The officers believed at this point it was reasonable to believe that someone inside the house was making an effort to prevent the officers from doing their job.

Once the firefighters pried open the exterior door, the officers cautiously made their way up the stairs. Sgt. Duran brought a breaching tool in the event there were more doors that needed to be forced open. Officer Doherty found the light switch and turned the stairway/hallway light back on. Once at the top of the staircase, the officers discovered that the apartment door in question was also locked.

After again knocking and announcing that the Quincy Police needed to check on all parties in the apartment and that the door would be forced, there was still no response. Using the breaching tool, the officers forced the door open and entered the dark unit. Sgt. Duran shouted, "Quincy Police! Make yourself known!" No one spoke so the officers conducted a protective sweep to clear the apartment of any threats to safety.

Sgt. Duran and Officer Reilly found a closed door which led to a bedroom where a male and female were in bed, appearing to be wide awake and did not look like they had been sleeping. They were ordered to show their hands which they did. The couple was separated and when questioned, could not offer a good reason why they hadn't opened the door other than that they were sleeping.

The male immediately began yelling and became uncooperative, demanding to know why he was being arrested. He was told that he was not under arrest and told of the reason why the officers were there. The officers struggled to convey their message to the male, who continued to interrupt, argue and ignore them. The male was upset and complaining that his door was destroyed and he would have to pay to fix it.

Oddly, the male confirmed several times on scene that he heard the knocking and heard the Police announcement at the door. When Sgt. Duran asked him why he didn't open the door when he knew it was the Police, the male responded, "I've been taught not to open the door for the police." Officer Reilly interviewed the female, who said they were out drinking earlier in a bar and her boyfriend/male was intoxicated. When they got home they started arguing with each other about how they were talking to other people in the bar and did not pay enough attention to each other. She said her boyfriend becomes argumentative and aggressive when he is drunk, but "Once he calms down everything should be okay."

She was advised of her domestic violence rights but she refused services. She also confirmed that moments earlier she heard the knocking at the door and heard "Quincy Police." The officers conferred and determined that everyone in the home was safe and peace was restored.

As the officers began making their way out of the apartment, the male continued being argumentative and started yelling, "Get the f@#$ out! You guys are f!@#$%, You guys are p#$$$^s." The officers believed the male was trying to provoke a fight with the officers.

Once out of the apartment, the male slammed the door shut. He then followed the officers to the exterior door and tried to slam it but it was too damaged from being pried

Ask Barbara Graceffa: 'Secretary Of The Interior' Mixing Metal Finishes

I have noted - both on home improvement TV shows and in decorating magazines - the mixing of metal finishes. For example: brass cabinet pulls used in a kitchen with stainless steel appliances. I'd like to give this a try throughout my home. Are there any rules to follow and how do you suggest I dip my toe in the water?

Louisa

You are very observant - mixing metals is everywhere now. Done right, mixed metals can add glamour, sparkle, and visual interest to any room.

To answer your last question first, here is some good advice for many decorating adventures: start small. Audition a small side table, a lamp, a mirror, or even a few pillows with metallic threads. You can always return these décor items if they just don't feel right in your space.

Now for three more rules. First, let one metal dominate. Add a second metal (or third) but stop there. This is a great example of "less is more." It is too easy to tip the scales from interesting to chaotic. (If you must include a third metal, elect iron because its black or dark brown finish can be treated as a neutral and will not compete for attention. Also, chrome, stainless, and silver can all be lumped into one as their color is so close to each other.)

Second, pepper the metals throughout the room. One way to achieve this is to vary the height of their placement in the room. For example, place mercury glass (a silver mirrored look) wall sconces and silver frames on the wall while choosing gold metal legs on your coffee table. Choose copper pendant lights over your kitchen island housing a brushed steel sink with chrome faucets. Or maybe hang a pretty mirror with an oversized gold frame as a statement piece in the room with clusters of ironclad picture frames on the mantel and bookshelves.

Third, vary a few textures or finishes of the metals including matte, satin, polished, brushed, hammered, or a patina finish to add both a fresh update and visual interest to your room.

Councillors Seek Additional Mitigation From T

into the Red Line, including projects to replace every train car on the line, install a new signal system, and a $300 million project to overhaul the line's railyard in South Boston.

Those projects also include work at each of the five stations along the Braintree Branch. The T is renovating the garages at Braintree and Quincy Center stations, both of which should be finished in the fall of 2021. The T is nearly finished with the demolition of the garage at Quincy Center, and angled parking places near the busway there will be re-added in March. Wollaston station closed in January 2018 and is set to re-open in August following a complete renovation to make it compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

The latest project began last week at North Quincy, where two private developers – Atlantic and Bozzuto Development – are planning a mixed-use development with 610 apartments and 45,000 square feet of retail space. The first phase of the project will include construction of a new garage; to accommodate the garage, 590 parking spaces on the Hancock Street side of the station are now closed. Six hundred ten spaces remain available at the station, including ones remaining on Hancock Street and the lot on Newport Avenue.

T officials have suggested commuters park at Wollaston station – where they said 250 of the 400 available spaces sat empty Monday – and ride a free shuttle to Quincy Center or North Quincy to catch the Red Line. The T is also providing a discount for Commuter Rail service from Quincy Center to Boston that will continue until the North Quincy garage opens in the fall of 2020.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, the chairman of the oversight committee, said the MBTA and other state agencies sometimes give city officials the feeling they should be happy with the money being spent and just live with the negative impacts of the projects.

"We're supposed to be happy you guys are making an investment in the city... we're just supposed to be happy and take it," Palmucci said about two hours into the meeting. "Shame on us for having any complaints or concerns about the way in which it's being done."

Beth Larkin, an assistant general manager with the MBTA, said the loss of parking spaces and other impacts on Quincy caused by the ongoing work is proportionate to the investment the T is making into the city.

"The magnitude of the displacement is probably commensurate with the magnitude of the investment," she said. "There is no other community that is getting the significant investment such as Quincy, and so the impact is more in Quincy than other communities."

Several councillors suggested the T utilize the 800-spot parking lot at Squantum Point Park, which is owned by the state Department of Conservation and Recreation, and provide a shuttle service from there to North Quincy while the garage is being built. During a community meeting Feb. 6, T officials said they would look into doing so if it were necessary.

Councillor Noel DiBona said the shuttle to and from Squantum Point Park should be implemented now and could be removed if not enough people were using it.

"I'd be more inclined for you to put it in, and if we don't need it take it away," he said Monday. "Would you be inclined to put it in use now and then if we don't need it maybe take it away?"

Evan Rowe, the MBTA's director of revenue, said it would not make sense to establish a new shuttle service with so many spaces open at Wollaston station.

"This is something that we are monitoring closely every single day. When you have 250 spaces open at Wollaston, we have to be prudent stewards of taxpayer money on this," Rowe said. "If people aren't taking advantage of shuttle-based parking at Wollaston, it's unlikely they would take advantage of shuttle-based parking at Squantum Point Park."

Councillor Anne Mahoney said running a shuttle service from Squantum Point Park would benefit Squantum residents who might be disinclined to drive to Wollaston to catch a shuttle bus there.

"People that are coming from Squantum do not want to drive from Squantum to Wollaston and take a bus back, because there is traffic everywhere," she said.

Another point of contention for councillors was expanding service on the three bus lines – the 210, 211 and 212 – that run between Quincy, Wollaston and North Quincy. The 211 was discussed in particular Monday night; that runs from Quincy Center to Squantum via Wollaston and Montclair, including a stop at the North Quincy station. The final 211 bus leaves Quincy Center at 7:20 p.m. on weekdays, arriving at North Quincy 12 minutes later and Squantum 10 minutes after that.

"The 211 bus and/or additional buses in and around that neighborhood, is there any way we can look into increasing the frequency to encourage people to not use their car and say 'wow, the 211 running past 7 p.m. – I don't have to take my car to North Quincy,'" said Councillor Nina Liang, who has pushed for the expanded bus service during several community meetings the T has hosted.

Larkin said it would not be possible to do so because the MBTA only has so many buses available and running more 211 buses would lead to degradation of service elsewhere.

Ward 6 Councillor William Harris said he did not buy that answer, noting the T can often provide additional service for special events like the Tall Ships or the Fourth of July concert on the Esplanade.

"Those are...events that happen once a year," Harris said. "We're talking about taking care of the people who go onto that bus every day of the year and support the T and keep it going."

Dorsey Dugan, a road control supervisor for the T, said later in the meeting that the two buses used on the 211 route return to the bus yard following their final run for maintenance and refueling. Those buses, he explained, have to be taken off the road at that point because they have been in service since 6 a.m.

Dugan said the T could look into extending the hours the 211 bus runs on weekdays, but the ridership on the line might not justify expanding service.

"Ridership is relatively low on the 211. I know the 211, I grew up on the 211, and I don't think enough people use it," Dugan said. "If we have additional resources, we put them in other lines that need them more."

The 230 going from Quincy Center toward Brockton is bursting at the seams all day long. The 211 is just not that popular of a bus.

"We would love to add it, but I don't think the ridership demand is really there."

The MBTA last fall raised the daily parking rates at Quincy Adams and Braintree from $7 to $9. Rowe said Braintree consistently fills up while Quincy Adams is often at 80 percent capacity; if it fills up, it does so later in the morning. Rowe said the number of cars parked at Quincy Adams has decreased somewhat since the fall, which he said could be because of the parking increase, the ongoing work at the garage or the opening of the pedestrian gate to the station on Independence Avenue.

DiBona suggested the T cut the price to park at Quincy Adams to encourage more commuters to park there; the T cut the price at Wollaston station from $5 to $2 last week when the North Quincy project began.

"Let's just say you lowered that amount from $9 to say $6 or $7, maybe you would get more people," DiBona said. "If you lower the price and hit full capacity, you make the same amount of money."

Rowe said lowering the

ROBERT E. "HUBIE" HUBER, "Quincy's Skydiving Santa" since 1976, passed away Feb. 13 in Lake Wales, Fla. The former Quincy resident was 79. He delighted thousands of young children annually since 1976 parachuting to the ground from an airplane along with his elves as part of the city's Christmas festivities. Here Mr. Huber prepares to land at Pageant Field during his jump in 2007. Mr. Huber's final jump came in 2017; he did not jump in 2016, the year Santa was injured during the skydive.

AFTER LANDING SAFELY at Pageant Field, Robert 'Hubie' Huber, better known as Quincy's 'Skydiving Santa,' greeted children who anxiously waited for the parachuting jolly old elf for his unique arrival. This file photo was taken in 2007. News of Mr. Huber's passing last week at the age of 79 saddened the community. He had delighted thousands parachuting to Quincy on the Saturday after Thanksgiving, a tradition that stretches back to the 1970s. His obituary was posted on The Quincy Sun website and shared with the newspaper's Facebook friends. More than 11,000 people had viewed the posting as of Monday morning. Many also expressed their condolences to the Huber family on their loss. One reader, Constance Sargent, summed it up for many by commenting: "What a kind soul to bring so much joy to so many."

Notes From Gracie's Bookshelf: Book Review By Gracie Warren

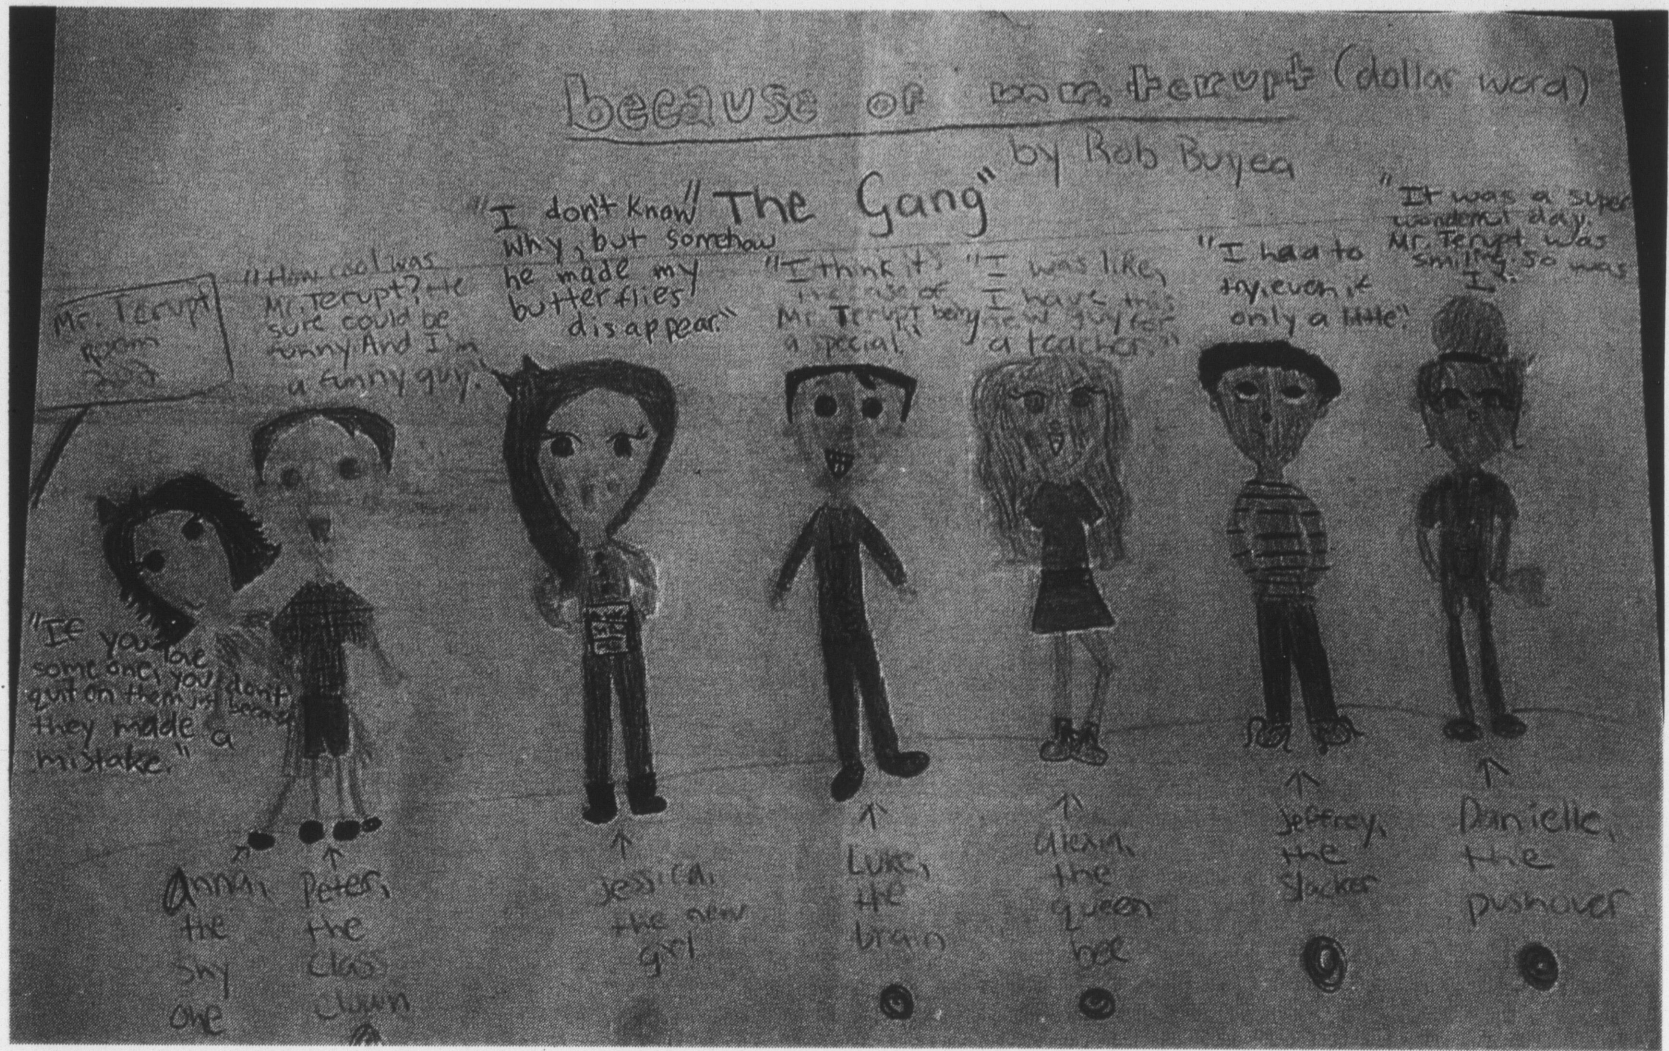

because of
mr. terupt
By Rob Buyea

Review, Illustration
By GRACIE WARREN

It's 5th grade and the teacher's name is Mr. Terupt. Seven kids are in Room 202 with him – they don't know each other and while they're expecting a normal teacher and school year, they are all in for a surprise.

Mr. Terupt is a very special teacher with cool projects like dollar words and counting the grass in the school soccer field. His students come to love him and when an accident happens to their beloved teacher, you get each one's perspective of the impact he has had on their lives.

A heart-breaking book with a wonderful ending, I have read this book twice in the last few months. I give it 10 stars!

Residents Discuss MBTA Fare Hike, Bus Route Proposals

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy residents had a chance to discuss MBTA proposals – including a planned fare increase and changes to bus routes – with representatives from the transit agency during a recent public meeting.

Dozens of residents attended the Feb. 20 meeting inside the Thomas Crane Public Library's community room. T officials set up different stations inside the room – which one official likened to a science fair – for various proposals the agency is considering, including a 6.3 percent fare increase, changes to dozens of bus routes, a new fare-collection system, and bus stop amenities. Residents at the meeting could learn more about each proposal and leave feedback with T representatives.

Joe Pesaturo, an MBTA spokesman who attended the meeting, said the format for the event was chosen because of the number of projects the transit agency has in the works.

"We decided to do something different because we have so many initiatives and proposals going on right now," he said. "People can talk about whatever project interests them the most."

T leadership will take the feedback from Quincy's meeting, and others ongoing through early March, into consideration before finalizing the plans.

"The MBTA Fiscal and Management Control Board has made it clear...that they want to consider all feedback presented to them before any decision is made," Pesaturo said.

The MBTA's board is considering an across-the-board 6.3 percent fare hike that would take effect July 1. The proposal would increase the cost for a one-way bus ride 10 cents, from $1.70 to $1.80, and the cost for a one-way train ride 15 cents, from $2.25 to $2.40. The cost for a monthly LinkPass – which offers unlimited bus and subway rides – would rise from $84.50 to $90 – and the cost for a monthly local bus pass would increase from $55 to $58.

The T has not raised fares since 2016. Under state law, the transit agency can increase fares up to 7 percent every two years.

The MBTA's Better Bus Project includes proposed changes to 47 bus routes that could be implemented as soon as this fall. Several routes that originate in Quincy would see changes, including the 201, 202, 215, 220, 222, 225 and 238. The T has proposed eliminating the 220 route's loop through Hingham Center, for example, and would have the 238 terminate at Quincy Adams instead of Quincy Center.

The complete list of bus changes can be viewed online at betterbus.mbta.com.

The T is preparing to roll out the new fare-collection system, dubbed Automatic Fare Collection 2.0, over the next several years. A pilot program could begin as soon as this fall, with a full roll out in mid 2020. The current system could be retired as soon as mid 2021.

Once AFC 2.0 is implemented, cash payments would no longer be allowed on buses, which is expected to speed up transit times. Fares could be paid with new Charlie Cards, by smartphone apps, and by contactless credit or debit cards. To accommodate the loss of cash payments, T officials have said they would allow riders to load value onto Charlie Cards online, by phone, at local retailers and at new fare vending machines that would be installed in additional locations.

The T is also contemplating new amenities at bus stops. Residents were asked to give their opinion on several options now being considered, including cellphone charging stations, heating, Wi-Fi, benches and signage with countdown clocks for incoming buses.

Danielle Kemp, a Quincy

resident, said she decided to attend the meeting to discuss the changes because, "There are a lot of things with the MBTA that they push down on us with no input."

Kemp, who takes the Red Line at least two times a week, said the proposed fare hike would not bother her as long as the T's service would keep up.

"The money going up is OK if they're providing the service," she said.

Marissa Deegan-Jones, a Quincy resident who rides a bus and the Red Line to her job in Cambridge, said the T needs to make sure it can provide basic services first before considering things like heat at bus stops.

"A lot of stops on the bus I take don't even have signs saying it is a bus stop," she said.

Accessibility is another priority Deegan-Jones identified, based on concerns she has heard from other riders.

"A lot of people cannot come to these meetings for one reason or another," she said. "It's about making sure the T knows this."

Rep. Bruce Ayers said he attended the meeting to learn more about the items the residents he represents are concerned about.

"I wanted to come tonight to listen and learn more about the MBTA's plans and have an opportunity to [focus] in on concerns I've been hearing from constituents," he said.

The fare increase is one of those concerns his constituents have expressed.

Quincy Girls Bow To KP, 63-52

The Quincy High School girls varsity basketball season came to a close Monday night as the 9th-seeded Presidents bowed to 8th-seeded King Philip Regional High School 63-52 in the Div. 1 South Sectional Tournament.

Quincy's offense was led by junior forward Juliana Tracey (team-high 18 points), junior guard Jillian O'Toole (13 points) and junior forward Allison McMorrow (13 points).

With the loss, the Presidents' season ended with a record of 14-9, 9-6 in the Patriot League.

For King Philip, Faye Veilleux led the way for the Warriors on offense with 18 points. Faith Roy (14 points) and Shannon O'Connor (11 points) also contributed.

Both teams came out hot with Quincy forcing multiple turnovers in the first quarter on their way to 16 points in the period. King Philip was able to weather the storm with some accurate shooting from the outside by junior Faye Veilleux. She had 14 points in the first half alone.

The Presidents struggled to score in the second, managing only seven. The clutch late free throw (6/6) shooting of King Philip that allowed them to extend their lead to 30-23 at the break. Both teams continued to battle throughout the second half with King Philip extending the lead to as many as 11 and Quincy cutting it back to 7 on multiple occasions but they could never quite get over that deficit.

Faith Roy's 12 second-half points kept the president's at bay. Ally McMorrow and Jillian O'Toole both contributed 13 points for the Presidents. O'Toole's relentless defensive pressure was stellar and kept the team's hopes alive. Quincy ended the game with O'Toole and their four outstanding seniors - Gia Calabro, Rachel Smith, Julianne Gazzola, and Ciana Williams - on the floor. Their contributions to this team's success will not be forgotten.

King Philip takes on #1 Bridgewater Raynham this Friday night.

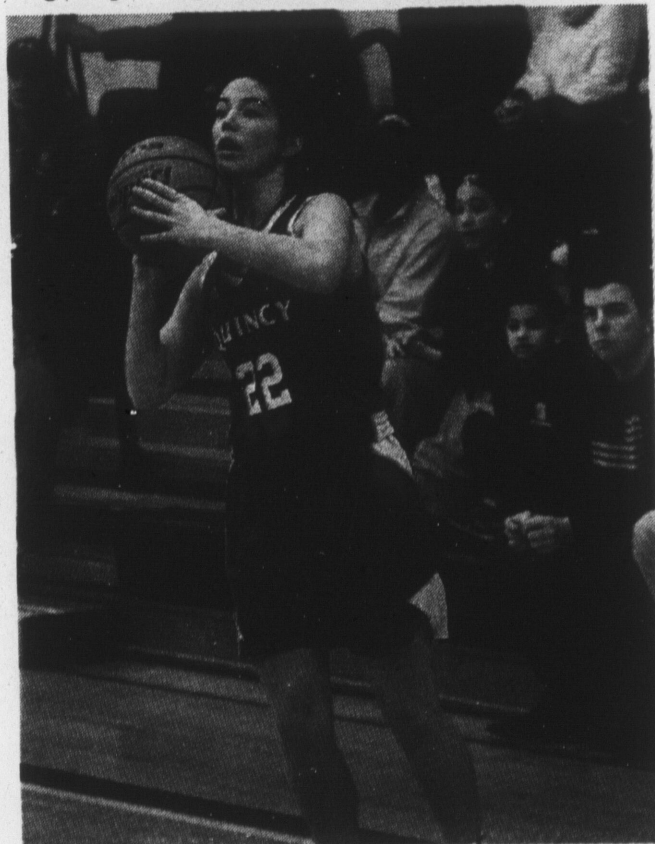

JUNIOR JILLIAN O'TOOLE played strong defense for the Presidents and also scored 13 points in a 63-52 loss to King Philip in the first round of the Div. 1 South Sectionals Monday night.

The Quincy High boys' basketball team gave it a strong effort, but were unable to advance following the first round of the MIAA Division 1 South sectional playoff bracket.

The No. 9 Presidents shined for 32 minutes and overcame a 10-point deficit in the final 2:30 of the game to send it to overtime. Ultimately, however, No. 8 Catholic Memorial got hot in overtime and won the game 78-66 at home. With the loss, Quincy finishes the season at 14-7 overall.

"We didn't give up," Presidents' head coach Dave Parry said. "This has been the most resilient group I've seen. They've all been such a pleasure to coach because of that and how hard they've worked. They left it all on the floor tonight. We really tried to persevere. I'm just so happy all of the fans came out for us. I think it was good for the city, and good for the kids to see such a turnout."

In the final two minutes of regulation, the Presidents surged back with an 8-0 run of their own. Most notably, with around 50 seconds remaining Will Zarges sank a three-pointer, got fouled in the process and made his three-pointer to make it a one basket game, 59-57.

The Presidents and Catholic Memorial then both traded a pair of free throws with Quincy's coming from Brendan Keaveny, keeping it a two point game.

With 6.9 seconds remaining in the fourth quarter, Catholic Memorial turned the ball over, forcing a Quincy timeout. Following it, Keaveny floated in a jump shot with 0.9 seconds

Ultimately, Catholic Memorial surged in OT, going on a 10-0 run to start things off. This deficit was too large for the Presidents to make a comeback. They hit one field goal in the overtime period.

With the win, Catholic Memorial advanced to the Div. 1 South quarterfinal where they will take on top-seeded Brookline on the road today (Thursday).

During the contest, it was clear Catholic Memorial had more depth than the Presidents, who essentially used seven players. However, the ones they did have out there played hard and matched up well against one of the tougher opponents in the area.

"We've lost some guys to injury," Parry said. "We did so well and then we had that little dry run there. Maybe we got tired, too. We knew with Catholic Memorial we had hoped to be able to slow them down, but we wouldn't be able to shut them down completely. We did the best we could but overall, I couldn't be happier with the way the kids represented the city tonight."

Much of the game was tightly contested, and the Presidents outplayed Catholic Memorial in the first half. The Presidents hit their shots at a near 50 percent rate while their foe hit under 30 percent of theirs. Quincy led 31-25 at the break.

Keaveny led their offensive charge, scoring 17 of his 25 points in the first half while grabbing 10 of his 15 rebounds in the first two quarters. Zarges also had a double-double for the Presidents, dropping 16 points and grabbing 10 rebounds in the game.

AJ Nelson (9 points) and Brandon Johnson (8 points) also shot the ball well for the Presidents.

In the second half, the Presidents ran into some foul trouble in the third quarter and as a result, they had to sit Keaveny and Nelson for a few minutes--and Catholic Memorial capitalized on the situation. By the end of the third quarter, they led 41-40 in the game.

Adding on to their foul trouble, Zarges also fouled out with 40 seconds remaining in the fourth quarter.

The loss for the Presidents snapped their five game win streak dating back to Feb. 13 when they beat Pembroke, 56-28.

The Presidents will lose five seniors to graduation now that their season is over: captains AJ Nelson, Will Zarges, Brendan Keaveny and Nick Cedrone as well as Ryan Polsgrove. That said, the team will, in all likelihood, end up looking a bit different next season. However, guards Brandon Johnson, a junior, and Dyllan Lopes, a sophomore, both of whom played extensive roles this season, are expected to return next season; they will be among a few players with varsity experience on the team.

"We'll have a lot of young kids coming in next year," Parry said, "so we figure to be a much younger team."

Cab Driver To Be Honored, Scamming Seminar Friday

Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Massachusetts Credit Unions will honor Quincy Yellow Cab Driver Richard Spencer Friday for preventing an 87 year-old woman from being scammed out of thousands of dollars' worth of gift cards. The presentation will be held at the Kennedy Senior Center on 440 East Squantum, St., in Quincy at 10 a.m.

In tribute of Spencer's heroic deed in recognizing the signs of elder financial exploitation and taking action to protect a senior from falling victim, Mayor Koch, the Credit Unions of Massachusetts along with Quincy Credit Union will present a check to the Kennedy Senior Center in Quincy. Scheduled to accept on behalf of the Kennedy Center are Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch and the Kennedy Center's director, Thomas Clabby, Jr. Also joining in the presentation will be Yellow Cab driver Richard Spencer; Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan; Quincy Credit Union Chief Marketing and Communications Officer, Judith Brazil; and Cooperative Credit Union Association SVP of Strategic Communications, Walter Laskos.

For the past year, Massachusetts Credit Unions have taken up the battle to protect seniors from financial exploitation, helping to raise awareness of what is seen as a $40 billion dollar industry. The credit unions have participated in radio interviews and sponsored radio commercials in addition to their signature educational program, CU Senior Safeguard, which they use to train and certify credit union employees to recognize the signs of elder financial exploitation and know what to do in response. CU Senior Safeguard is also offered free to caregivers and seniors alike at www.bettervaluesbetterbanking.com.

The credit unions have also sponsored a number of "Lunch & Learn" gatherings at senior centers across the state where together with local lawmakers, police and social services providers, they educate seniors about financial scams and how they can protect themselves from falling victim.

Mayor Koch and Chief Keenan will also participate in a roundtable discussion about senior citizen scamming and safety on WRKO today (Thursday) at 2:30 p.m.

The Cooperative Credit Union Association is a regional trade organization serving as the voice for nearly 200-member credit unions primarily located in the States of Delaware, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island. CCUA member credit unions hold combined assets in excess of $45 billion and serve a collective membership base of more than 2.3 million consumers.

On behalf of these member credit unions, CCUA advocates before Congress and state legislatures, regulatory bodies and to the general public through its Better Values—Better Banking consumer awareness campaign. In addition to advocacy, CCUA also engages its member credit unions with an array of industry resources, from compliance assets and marketing support to vetted products and service providers; educational workshops and conferences; and, a variety of communications, from a daily e-newsletter to simulcast video programs.

City Awarded $225,000 For Seawall Design

The first phase – which was discussed during several community meetings last year and approved by the Conservation Commission in November – covers the shoreline between Chickatabot Road and Babcock Street. The first phase of the project will include the replacement of about 8,000 linear feet of seawall.

The second phase would go from Babcock Street to Bayswater Road. The second phase includes 4,275 linear feet of seawall.

Ward 1 Councillor David

McCarthy, who represents the neighborhoods behind the seawall that will be replaced, welcomed the grant Monday.

"We're lucky to get the grant and I think this is a great move forward for phase two. I'm all in favor of this," he said.

The $56,250 appropriation came from the sewer and drain rehabilitation fund. Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain, chairman of the council's finance committee, said more than $3.4 million was available inside that fund prior to Monday's vote.

The $225,000 state grant for the seawall design came from the dam and seawall repair and removal program. The city had received a similar grant for the first phase of the seawall project.

Students Sharpen Skills In Extended Day Programs

By TOM GORMAN

Students can sharpen their academic, social, and development skills thanks to the Quincy Public Schools' extended day programs.

The program's coordinators, Janet Loftus, Courtney Mitchell and Edward Smith outlined the various offerings in a newsletter that was sent out last month. The program is offered at all grade levels across the city.

The coordinators noted that the extended day program provides "a diverse menu of clubs and activities that inspire and challenge our students before and after school."

"From community service outreach programs, to the arts, STEM (Science Technology Engineering Math), and wellness activities, our programs cover a variety of topics intended to support students academically, developmentally, and social-emotionally," stated the coordinators. "In all Quincy Public Schools, we strive as an educational community to embody the whole student, and our extended day activities give us an outstanding opportunity to do this beyond the bell across all grade levels."

The district's STEM Academy is open to elementary students in grades 3 to five and middle school grades 6 to 8 students.

At the elementary level, students participating in the Planes, Rockets, Cars and Coasters program design, test and develop types of models with a focus on how the models are powered. The students build pneumatic rockets, balloon powered cars, and Alka-Seltzer rockets.

The Coding is Elementary program exposes students to basic computer programming concepts and work collaboratively to investigate problem-solving techniques and learn about internet safety.

The middle school STEM program involves structural engineering and architecture.

In the Bridges, Towers and Structures, students are introduced to structural engineering design elements through inquiry learning tasks. Students in the Archi-ecture and Design program will design two and three-dimensional floor plans and build a model of a custom-designed house.

There is a $25 charge for participating in the STEM Academy.

In the elementary schools, such clubs are offered to enhance computer and writing skills. At the Squantum School, its computer club is a 10-week program for fourth and fifth graders. The students learn the basics of HTML programming and use coding, creativity and collaboration to build websites.

Also at Squantum is the School Players that perform musical plays. The group meets each Tuesday and Thursday morning from October through March and performs afternoon and evening shows for students and the community.

Student Meaghan Smith said that the club helps her be a team player.

"Being part of a team has improved my ability to communicate and interact with others," she states.

price at Quincy Adams to encourage parking there "is something we're absolutely going to look at."

In addition to the projects underway, Jeff Cook, the T's chief real estate officer, provided an update on the planned mixed-use development at Quincy Center.

The MBTA granted Atlantic and Bozzuto – the two developers behind the North Quincy project – rights to the Quincy Center project in late 2017.

Cook on Monday said the T issued the developers a conditional designation letter for the Quincy Center project last September, which would start a 90-day due-diligence once work began at North Quincy. The T is now reviewing the initial letter, he said, and will reissue it within the next 30 days, starting the 90-day due-diligence at that point.

Cook said the latest iteration of the plan calls for a 275,000-square-foot project at Quincy Center.

A Job Well Done

open. As the front door remained open, the male continued yelling obscenities from the hallway, calling the officers "F!@#$%."

As the officers walked towards their cruisers, the male continued shouting loudly from the door causing a disturbance to the peace and quiet of the residential neighborhood at 2:30 a.m. Several lights that were on in the houses in the area now and residents were looking out their windows at the male causing a scene.

After a few moments of shouting, he slammed the door and went back inside his home. As the officers began to drive away, the male came back outside and asked to speak with the officers. He said that his girlfriend wanted to talk to the officers. When asked what she wanted, the male said "She wants to talk to you because I'm abusing her." He then said, "Let's do this," implying he was expecting to be arrested.

Officer Reilly met with the female again and she said that her boyfriend was not abusive but that he was just aggressive and drunk and she wanted help in calming him down. She then began crying and said she was from western Massachusetts and she didn't have anyone else to turn to in the Quincy area.

As the officers were about to leave after calming the female, the male, standing on the front porch threatened, "I want to step into a cell with you and beat the sh#$ out of you." As the officers returned to their cruisers, the screaming started up again. The officers approached the male and female, who were now on the porch. She was crying again and appeared shaken up as if something just happened. The male said, "You don't need to talk to her" as he directed obscenities towards the officers.

Officer Reilly again spoke with the female, who said her boyfriend/male did not touch her and no crime occurred she said she was just upset. The male, upon hearing this,

Shouted, "There you go - now leave!" The female became upset at the way her boyfriend/male was talking to the officers and she asked him to calm down, that the officers were just doing their job.

The male became irate and then told her to go upstairs. She fell to her knees and started crying hysterically. At this point, the officers placed the 24-year-old male under arrest for disturbing the peace and interfering with a police officer. Nice Work! (and patience!)

Lighthouse Fellowship Announces March Activities

Lighthouse Fellowship at 73 Newbury Ave., North Quincy meets each Sunday for worship and teaching at 10 a.m.

The worship band leads singing with a blend of contemporary songs and hymns and Pastor Mike Fehan continues a sermon series in the Gospel of Mark. On Sunday, March 3, the congregation will hold their annual meeting after sharing lunch together. This will be a time to review the ways God has provided and blessed the church in the past year and to set goals for the coming year.

On Sunday, March 10th, WOW (Women of the Word) will gather after the service for their monthly time of sharing and study. After lunch Caroline Maringa will tell about her work at the Oasis of Peace Orphanage in Embu, Kenya where 46 orphans are cared for and educated. This wonderful work is led by Virginia Burbank who started it after 32 years of teaching English at Cohasset High. Caroline will share about the children's progress and the traumatic situations they have been rescued from. All women are welcome to come.

Lighthouse offers Bible studies weekly. Each Sunday morning at 9 a.m., Steve Emery leads the adult Bible class before the service. A men's group and the open-to-all Bible study meet on alternate Tuesday evenings. On March 5 and 19 all are welcome at the study held in the parsonage next to the church. The study on March 5 will include dinner. On March 12 and 26 the men will enjoy some pizza and a DVD-guided study together. The teaching and small group discussions are always an encouragement. Men of all ages are welcome to join in.

A women's group meets Tuesday mornings at 9:45 in Squantum for some coffee and lively discussion. Using a Life Guide study called Good and Evil they are exploring some tough issues and why bad things happen in God's world. Another group meets in Braintree on Thursday evenings. Anyone interested can learn more details by calling 617-406-8204.

The youth meet every other Friday evening for sports, fun, a lesson and, of course, food. The next get-togethers are on March 8 and 22 at the church with Pastor Mike, Kyera Bryant and Rick McGue leading the charge.

Lighthouse Fellowship has also planned two mission experiences for 2019. These opportunities are wonderful ways to serve others, but they also break us out of our comfort zone. Those who have gone on previous trips have also developed a new connection with team members because of the shared experience and the new perspectives gained.

One group will participate with Habitat for Humanity's Homebuilding Blitz in North Carolina in May, building a home in one week for a low-income family. In July, another team will serve refugees in Athens, Greece. It is a cause for praise that in the past year God has enabled Lighthouse once again to disburse 10% of its unrestricted income to support of Christian mission endeavors around the world, plus additional funds that members raised to send mission teams and aid to Texas, Greece and Syria.

City Cleaning Veterans Lots At Cemeteries

Quincy Veterans Services Department will begin to clean up the veterans lots at Mount Wollaston and Pine Hill cemeteries beginning March 15.

"During this time we will be removing all Christmas decorations and holiday plants. Plus anything that becomes unsightly and anything that interferes with the cemetery operations such as mowing and cleaning up in anticipation of our memorial day ceremony," said George Bouchard, Graves Registration Officer for Quincy Veterans Services.

"Temporary pots of natural flowers may be placed throughout the year but will be removed when their presence interferes with grounds maintenance. There's no in-ground planting allowed at the foot markers in the veterans' lot. Permanent planting such as plastic plants or flowers, statues, vigil lights, wind chimes, planting urns and breakable objects are not permitted at any time," Bouchard said.

"This is the final resting place for our local veterans and we ask all of you to please cooperate with us in keeping it clean and beautiful when you pay your respect to your loved one. Thank you for your cooperation in this manner," Bouchard added.

Signs Approved For New Quincy Center Businesses

By TOM GORMAN

The Quincy Historical Commission gave five new businesses the green light to prominently display their exterior signs on Quincy Center buildings.

During five separate hearings on Monday, the commission approved new signage on four buildings. The commission had the final say on the signs since the buildings are in the historic district of the city.

New tenants moving into 10 Granite St. prompted the need for new signage.

According to Sean Kennealy, President of Key Realty of Quincy whose company is leasing out the building, Stop & Shop and Anodyne companies have moved in. They are replacing SAR Engineers that had occupied most of the facility that has since moved to Braintree.

Stop & Shop, operating under Retail Business Services, will occupy the two top floors of the four-story building where it will employ 260 workers. Anodyne, a medical staffing agency that has been in the city for some 35 years, has relocated its operation to the second floor.

Kennealy is also moving his realty company — a fixture for 45 years in Quincy — in the building, after purchasing the first floor. A law firm on the first floor moved out and a massage therapist there will leave once their lease expires next year.

The existing SAR letters atop the building and over the front entrance will be replaced by Retail Business Services. The word "Services" will be placed under "Retail Business." At the left side of the words will be the company's logo in the shape of an abstract "R" of three different shades of green.

At the top of the building, the signage will measure 218-1/2 inches across, and the logo 36-inches high. The capital letters of "Retail Business Services" measure 15-1/2 inches tall and the small letters measure 11-1/4 inches high.

Over the front entrance, the sign will be 145-5/8 inches across with a 24-inch high logo. The capital lettering measure 10-1/4 inches high and the small letters will be 7-1/2 inches tall.

In addition, over the front entrance, the Anodyne company will have its sign just beneath Retail Business Services.

The Anodyne lettering is 18-inches high and is accompanied at the left with its diamond shaped logo measuring 24-inches tall. There will be an aluminum divider line between the Retail Business Services and the Anodyne sign and another under the Anodyne lettering.

All the aluminum letters and logos are standalone and backlit.

Kennealy's Key Realty sign will be placed above the first floor. It will measure 104-3/8 inches across and 49-inches high. The "KEY" letters are 22-inches tall and "REALTY," located beneath, is 14-1/2 inches tall. "Commercial Brokerage & Advisory Services" will be placed at the bottom of the block and measure 6-inches tall. The company's logo — an image of a white key in a blue box — will be next to the "KEY" lettering.

The city's Deputy Planning Director Robert Stevens told the commission that Kennealy's original sign proposal had to be reworked.

"It had some issues due to multiple tenants moving into the building," Stevens said. "It was beyond what zoning allowed."

The planning board reviewed and approved Kennealy's change including reducing the size of the Retail Business Services logo from 42 inches to 36 inches.

"This fits," said Stevens of the revision.

Kennealy said he had the signs designed to conform with other signs in Quincy Center such as at 1400 Hancock St. and at Presidents Place.

"It's more uniform," he said.

Commission Chairman Anthony Ricci amended the application to include a requirement that any other proposed signage at the building must come before the commission.

Stevens said the new tenants are "healthy for the building and for Quincy Center."

Crush Pizza is moving into the former Jimmy John's location at Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St. The two proposed Crush Pizza signs will be the same size as Jimmy John's over the first floor exterior. There will no window signage.

The word "CRUSH" will be white capital letters in a red oblong with a green stem at the left. It will measure 84 inches long by 32 inches high.

"PIZZA" will be 81 inches long by 18 inches high and will be standalone capital block brushed aluminum finish letters. The signs are internally lit.

Owner Tony Naser said he is expanding his family-owned business into Quincy. He has had a location on State Street in downtown Boston for the past three years.

"This will be our second restaurant," he said. "We plan to open in a month-and-a-half."

Ireland Beauty spa is opening a second location in the new Galvin Building at 2 Cliveden St. in the Parkingway. The 18-inch high by 12-foot long black matte aluminum sign will have 8-inch high silver vinyl lettering mounted to the brick façade. There will be signs in some of the 45-inch wide by 84-inch tall windows. The signs will feature a 20-inch circular logo with 3-inch silver graphics.

Representative Randy Hard said owner, Christine Doody, is expanding her business to Quincy Center. She currently has a location on West Squantum Street.

Purefections Chocolate owners Christina Bartkus and Lisa Trifone are moving their Franklin Street store to a new location at 1348 Hancock St., the former Subway shop. The existing 2-foot high by 24-foot long black sign over the front entrance will feature 12-inch high gold capital letters spelling out "PUREFECTIONS CHOCOLATE." The store is expected to open next week.

In other matters, Ricci informed the commission that an application has been submitted to the community preservation commission seeking a $40,000 grant to create an updated searchable list of the city's historic buildings. The new list would include information about the specific buildings and be available on websites and at the Thomas Crane Library.

Ricci explained that First Parish Church Historical Program Director Bob Damon is preparing a report for Mayor Thomas Koch outlining the historic resources of the city's heritage and its historic districts. Damon is also cataloging the city's historical buildings.

Ricci noted that the last survey of the city's historic buildings was conducted in 1986 and had about 600 buildings listed. In 2009 another survey was conducted including downtown buildings when the planning department instituted the downtown historic district.

"So, we have the original list and we have the addendum list," he said.

Ricci said the documents do not include which buildings are on the National Historic Register or which are city owned. He said creating an updated list is needed to include all current and specific information about each building.

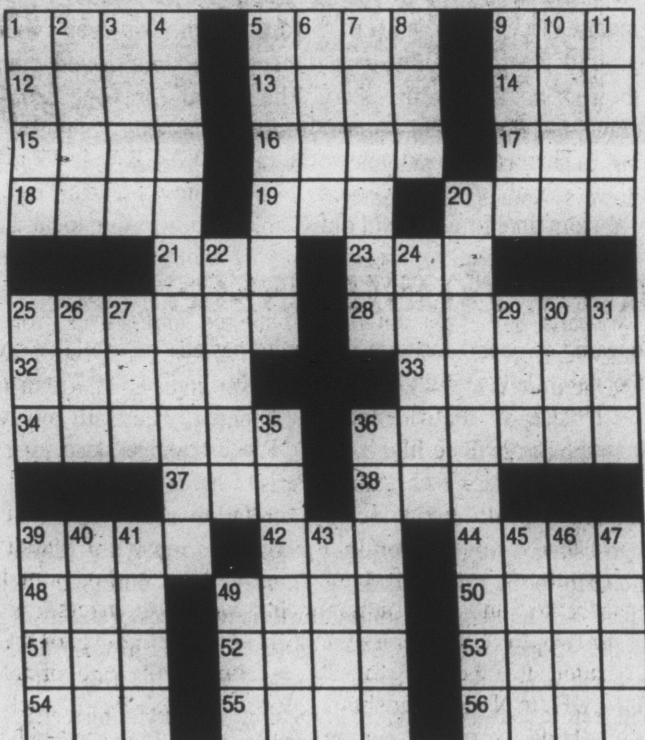

"I think it would be helpful for the community as a whole and for us," Ricci said.

The commission reorganized with Ricci reelected as chairman and Edward Fitzgerald reelected as vice chairman.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Take time from your busy schedule to check out what's going on around you. You might find that someone has been secretly trying to pull the wool over those beautiful Sheep's eyes.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Once again, the Bovine's boldness pays off in uncovering the source of a disturbing workplace situation. Your personal life calls for patience, as a certain matter plays itself out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Forget about going all out to impress someone in your personal life. Just being yourself is all that matters. A workplace decision will need more time. Don't rush into it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Some supersensitive Crabs might take offense at what they perceive as a slight. But a closer look points to a simple misunderstanding. The weekend holds a welcome surprise.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Sure, you can roar your head off over someone's failure to keep a promise. But the wiser course would be to ask why it happened. Be prepared for an answer that might well surprise you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A developing relationship needs time to find its direction. So please be patient and resist pushing things along. A recently cooled-down workplace situation could heat up again.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Congratulations. Your well-thought-out proposal seems to be working.

Someone who hasn't agreed with you on most things in the past could turn out to be one of your major supporters.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Things seem to be going well. However, you can still expect criticism — some of it pretty heavy. But as long as you can back up your position, you'll be able to rise above it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Getting together with people who care for you is a great way to get that ego boost you might feel you need at this time. Things start to look brighter by week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You should be able to continue with your plans once you get past those temporary delays. Surprise, surprise. An offer to help comes from a most unlikely source.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Prioritizing your tasks is important this week because of all those demands you have to deal with. The pressure eases in time for you to enjoy the weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Save your energy and stay focused on what has to be done, despite all those distractions you're likely to face. You should see some evidence of real progress by week's end.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a generous, giving person who is always ready, willing and more than able to help others in need.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- The success of Tom Cruise's "Mission Impossible: Fallout," which grossed nearly $800 million, has prompted Paramount Pictures to announce there will be a seventh and eighth film in the series. As soon as Cruise finishes "Top Gun Maverick," due for a July 2020 release, he'll film both "Mission Impossible" films at age 58 and 59. They'll be released in July 2021 and August 2022, respectively.

And before you think that Tom Cruise must be the oldest action superstar, take a look at 66-year-old Liam Neeson's slate of upcoming films, beyond his recently released "Cold Pursuit." He's joining Chris Hemsworth in "Men In Black: International," arriving June 14; the crime thriller "Honest Thief," with Kate Walsh; and the romance drama, "Normal People."

Hemsworth jumps from "Men In Black: International" right into the Netflix drama "Dhaka," in which he plays a mercenary hired to rescue the kidnapped son of an Indian businessman.

If you thought the alleged child molesting controversy over Michael Jackson ended when he died, guess again. A new four-hour, three-part documentary called "Leaving Neverland" may blow the lid off the scandal. Two boys, who were 7 and 11 at the time and later sued his estate (the case was dismissed), claim, "We felt close to Michael with a kind of love for him and wanted to do whatever it took to please him." They also admit they never thought what they were being asked to do was wrong.

John Travolta is making a film comeback. His last outing as crime boss (John "Gotti" cost $10 million and only grossed $4.3 million. Travolta, now 64, hits screens in the heist thriller "Finding Steve McQueen," with Oscar-winner Forest Whitaker, Travis Fimmel and "Mom's" William Fichtner, about a gang planning to steal millions from President Richard Nixon's illegal political slush fund (due March 15). That's quickly followed by "Trading Paint," in which he plays a race driver, with Shania Twain and Michael Madsen (out March 22); the crime thriller "The Poison Rose," with Oscar-winner Morgan Freeman and Brendan Fraser; and the thriller "Moose," in which he's a deranged fan who stalks an action hero and destroys his life. It's based on the true-life experiences of Fred Durst, lead vocalist for rock band Limp Bizkit, who wrote and directs the film.

Charlie Sheen, who had that famous public meltdown, saw his last film, "9/11," with Gina Gershon, gross just $192,318. His last TV appearances, in "The Goldbergs" (2017) and the Comedy Central series "Typical Rick" (two episodes in 2017), were hardly memorable either. His misfortune is a top topic at Hollywood parties with the revelation, "Hey, they figured out how much drugs Charlie Sheen did when he flipped out ... enough to kill 'Two and a Half Men'!!!!"

KOVELS' Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Wemyss Ware Pig

Marks on antiques, especially silver or ceramics, can lead a collector to history and age. However, the mark's information can sometimes be confusing. A date may be the year the pottery business started. A name may be the name of the seller, not the maker. And sometimes, especially with Asian ceramics, recent copies are so accurate even the old mark is reproduced. Wemyss Ware is the name used as a mark by Robert Heron & Son (later called Fife Pottery), which started making creamware in Scotland about 1820. They later used the Wemyss mark. During the mid-1800s, European artists were hired. The most famous was Karel Nekola, who stayed for 33 years. In the 1930s, Bovey Pottery of Devon, England, bought the rights to make Wemyss Ware and hired Joseph Nekola Karelson. The pottery by Fife and Bovey is so similar, experts judge the maker by slight color differences. Joseph died in 1952, and very little Wemyss was made in the 1960s and 1970s. But in 1985, Griselda Hill pottery started making it, and they now own the Wemyss Ware trademark.

A ceramic pig that looks like Wemyss sold at a recent Hummer and Nolan auction for $472. It is marked "Plichta, London, England" and "Nekola Pinxt Plichta." Jan Plichta was a pottery and glass wholesaler who worked in London and, by 1916, bought many things from Bovey Pottery. The Latin mark means "Nekola painted design [for] Plichta," evidence the pig was made before 1952. Very early flower-decorated pigs have auctioned for over $30,000.

Q: I recently found two old dining-room chairs in my attic that I remember using as a child 70 years ago. They have an arched back, six turned spindles and a shaped seat. I remember them having a shiny black finish, but they are very worn. I'm thinking of repainting them, but my son suggests that doing so might reduce their value. Can you tell me what their value is and whether repainting would make them more or less valuable?

A: Repainting or refinishing will lower the value of a piece of furniture if it is a valuable antique, made by a well-known craftsman or finished with a hand-painted technique like grain painting. Your chairs are not very old; they're probably from the early 1900s. They are worth about $50. So, in your case, repainting them might bring them back to life and raise their decorative value.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was 20th-century British actor George Sewell who made the following sage observation: "Fear is the tax that conscience pays to guilt."

* When someone mentions the band ZZ Top, you probably think of a group of musicians with long beards. They don't all have beards, though; the drummer is clean-shaven as a matter of safety (imagine being in the middle of a drum solo and getting a stick caught in a long beard -- ouch!). Interestingly, the unbearded drummer's name is Frank Beard.

* If you're like most people, you've probably never encountered a tziganolologist. That is, unless you consort with those who study Hungarian gypsies.

* Those who study such things say that the immortal bard, William Shakespeare, used a grand total of 17,677 words in his works. (That must have been a tedious calculation.)

They also say that fully one-tenth of those words had never been used in writing before.

* Unless you were around on April 17, 1964, you may not be aware of the hullabaloo caused by the introduction of the Ford Mustang. In Seattle, a truck driver was so distracted by a display of new Mustangs that he crashed his cement truck through the window of the dealership. In Chicago, so many people were trying to crowd into the cars in a showroom that the dealer had to lock all the vehicle doors. A dealer in New Jersey had only one Mustang, so he auctioned it off. The winner of the auction insisted on sleeping in his new car that night, just to make sure nobody else got it before his check cleared.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* There are good reasons to recaulk your baseboards from time to time. Not only will it give you a clean look, but it will help to stop drafts and block out bugs, which can creep in through the tiniest of cracks.

* "Here's a tip for making a box cake taste like it was made from scratch: Add an extra egg, use melted butter instead of oil and use milk (whole) in place of water. Mix for an extra minute or two, to really aerate the batter. It'll be gorgeous."

-- T.H. in New Hampshire

* "Hide the cords coming from your wall-mounted television by running them through a length of PVC pipe. It can be painted to match your wall, too! Measure the length you need, and your hardware store may be able to cut a piece for you if you can't find one the right size. It looks so much cleaner, and you can even use double-stick tape to attach the pipe to the wall." -- B.B. in Florida

* "Donate extra throw blankets to your local animal shelters. In fact, visit the website of your local shelter and check for a 'wish list' to see if you have anything that can be donated. They are always in need, and so deserving."

-- F.I. in Texas

* "On weekend trips to our cabin, we pack a laundry basket for each bedroom. It includes fresh sheets, towels and the clothing for that person. At the end of the weekend, it's easy to 'pack' those items that need to be laundered. The bonus is that they stack nicely in the back of the car, and they're a snap to unpack, too!" -- A.H. in North Carolina

The club helps classmate Angelina Lin build confidence.

"I am not afraid of standing up in front of an audience and speaking," she states. "To me, it's fun to lead."

The Parker School's writing club is an after-school program for fourth and fifth grade students. The program focuses on building students' research and synthesizing skills. Students use laptops to plan and produce a research paper of a topic of their choice.

The Merrymount School offers a math drop-in Tuesday through Thursday mornings starting at 7:30. Students can get some extra help with their math homework, particularly those having trouble with concept or solving word problems such as constructed response questions.

"Girls on the Run" is a national non-profit that encourages positive social, emotional, mental, and physical development. This program is offered at the Montclair School and is limited to 10 students. Physical activity is the main part of the program to inspire good fitness and healthy choice habits.

Some students who participated in the program said that it helped them learn about themselves, their friends, and their capabilities.

"These girls became my family and we had a lot of fun," stated student Sarah Malushi.

At the end of each three-month session, the students participate in a Girls on the Run 5K race. This past December, the students ran with other Greater Boston area teams.

At the Lincoln-Hancock School, a storybook STEM (Science Technology Engineering Math) is offered for grade 2 students who read aloud a story and participate in a STEM activity relating to the theme of the story.

One story was about the properties of liquids and solids. Students were introduced to the concept of polymers and made slime and discussed how it is a polymer.

Snug Harbor's soccer program was held last fall on the newly lined fields behind the school. There were five teams with 13 students each. The program is held Mondays and Wednesdays.

Clifford Marshall

School's coding concepts is an eight-week program for fourth grade students. They started with basic computer coding and programming then moved up to HTML structures to build a website.

The Natures Explorers Club at the Beechwood Knoll School meets each Thursday. There are 12 second and third grade students that check out types of trees, identify bugs and animals in the park, go on scavenger hunts and nature walks.

Also at Beechwood is the needlepoint club where nine, third grade girls meet Thursday afternoons to learn about needlepoint. They create bookmarks by using diagonal stitches and various types and colors of yarn.

At the middle school level, a robotics program is offered. The Its FLL – First Lego League – teams worked throughout last fall readying for the Dec. 8 regional competition. There were 75 Quincy middle school students participated.

Point Webster won the Research Award and Central captured the Inspiration Award and earned high robot performance scores. Central's team moved on to the state championship the following week.

The middle schools are now gearing up for the spring competitions.

Other extended day programs at the middle schools include Atlantic's Math-Counts Club and Step Up to the Plate.

The math program involves sixth graders who meet each Wednesday and form small groups to collaborate on understanding the challenging grade 6 math concepts. The Step Up to the Plate club helps enhance English Language Arts skills.

Broad Meadows' Operation Work Day is a global community service group. Last fall, it hosted a Halloween dance and haunted hallway, raising more than $1,000 that was donated to local charities.

Point Webster Singers is open to all grades that meet twice weekly before school. The program offers vocal training and choral repertoire.

The high schools have student councils and a combined choir and band.

In December, North Quincy High School's photography club displayed their photos and digital art during an exhibit to raise money for Boston Children's Hospital. Quincy High School student council hosted spirit week and Halloween events last fall.

Students in all grades are required to participate in 30 hours of community service programs. Some of the extended day programs have community outreach components that can help students attain the requirement.

- Interior as well as exterior work continues to take place within the site of the new Nova Residences located at 1500 Hancock Street.

Worker's in the middle right are forming for footings while the iron workers are building the rebar cages. Ayers: MBTA Commuters Deserve More Reliable Options needed parking spaces are lost – and the number of displaced commuters continues to grow.

This places a significant burden on the North Quincy area, which already faces extreme congestion. For a neighborhood with over 30 businesses, 4 schools, a church, and a library, this project will only result in increased daily traffic gridlock and unnecessary headaches for residents. Something must be done.

We have a unique opportunity to provide relief for commuters who are frustrated by a lack of parking, traffic congestion on the roads (and the Neponset Bridge), and increasingly unreliable service on the Red Line by investing in another option of public transportation. Mitigation funds towards a ferry service from Squantum Point Park into Boston just makes sense – and almost no work would need to be done to prepare the area.

Squantum Point Park has a state-owned pier and dock structure, as well as an under-utilized 800-space parking lot. What's more, the extension of Commander Shea Boulevard is over 80 percent completed, creating easy access from the highway and alleviating traffic concerns for Marina Bay residents.

The city of Quincy has devoted funding to upgrade these structures, and has invested in long-term planning for the area as well – a clear indication that water transportation is a priority.

Over the last three years, Quincy has been able to successfully partner with the town of Winthrop to provide seasonal ferry service out of Squantum Point Park. Ridership numbers increase steadily every year, demonstrating a need as well as an established ridership base.

This data only supplements studies from organizations like the Pioneer Institute and Boston Harbor Now that claim water transportation may be the most economically responsible and environmentally friendly means of public transit – with Quincy as a prime location for implementation.

At the very least, the recently updated parking lot at Squantum Point Park could provide some parking relief if the MBTA were to implement a shuttle to and from North Quincy Station.

Despite all of this work and compelling data, the MBTA has failed to act. Funding for a ferry service from Squantum Point Park was not part of the mitigation plan presented at the North Quincy public meeting, despite assurances in years past that they would utilize the area. Instead, the MBTA seems content to demand that consumers adjust to their failure, rather than meeting the needs of commuters.

The bottom line is that the MBTA has become increasingly unreliable. Red Line riders will continue to endure signaling delays, maintenance issues, overcrowded platforms, and other frequent problems – all as the MBTA removes 600 parking spaces, while simultaneously unveiling a proposal to increase their ridership fares.

Quincy and South Shore commuters deserve better, and have made their desire for more reliable public transportation options abundantly clear. Now it's time for the MBTA to listen, take advantage of existing infrastructure, and ease the burden placed on our residents and neighborhoods. It's time to fund a ferry service from Squantum Point Park.

Residents Discuss MBTA Fare Hike, Bus Route Proposals

stituents have raised.

"They want to know where the money is going," Ayers said, noting residents also had questions about bus routes and the new fare-collection system.

He said he liked the format for the meeting because it allowed residents to learn more about, and provide feedback on, the item, or items, they care most about.

"They can get an answer and go," Ayers said.

In addition to the proposals residents were asked about during the meeting, projects are now underway at all five Red Line stations south of Boston. The T is renovating the garages at the Braintree and Quincy Adams stations, is finishing the demolition of the garage at the Quincy Center station, is in the process of renovating Wollaston station, which is expected to re-open this summer, and has begun a mixed-use project at North Quincy that will include 610 apartments and 45,000 square feet of retail space.

The first phase of the North Quincy project began Feb. 17 when the T closed 600 parking spaces on the Hancock Street side of the station. A new garage will be constructed there over the next 18 months; it will include 852 spaces for Red Line riders – equal to the number of spaces previously available on that side of the station – with 700 more for residential and retail use.

Quincy resident Will Isenberg said he wanted to discuss the North Quincy project with T officials during the public meeting.

"I was curious to see discussion of the North Quincy parking situation. It's really going to affect our family," he said. "It's frustrating because the Wollaston T is months from being ready and I don't know where we're going to park."

Jeff Gonneville, the MBTA's deputy general manager, said the T would work to address concerns residents have raised about the closure of the North Quincy parking spaces.

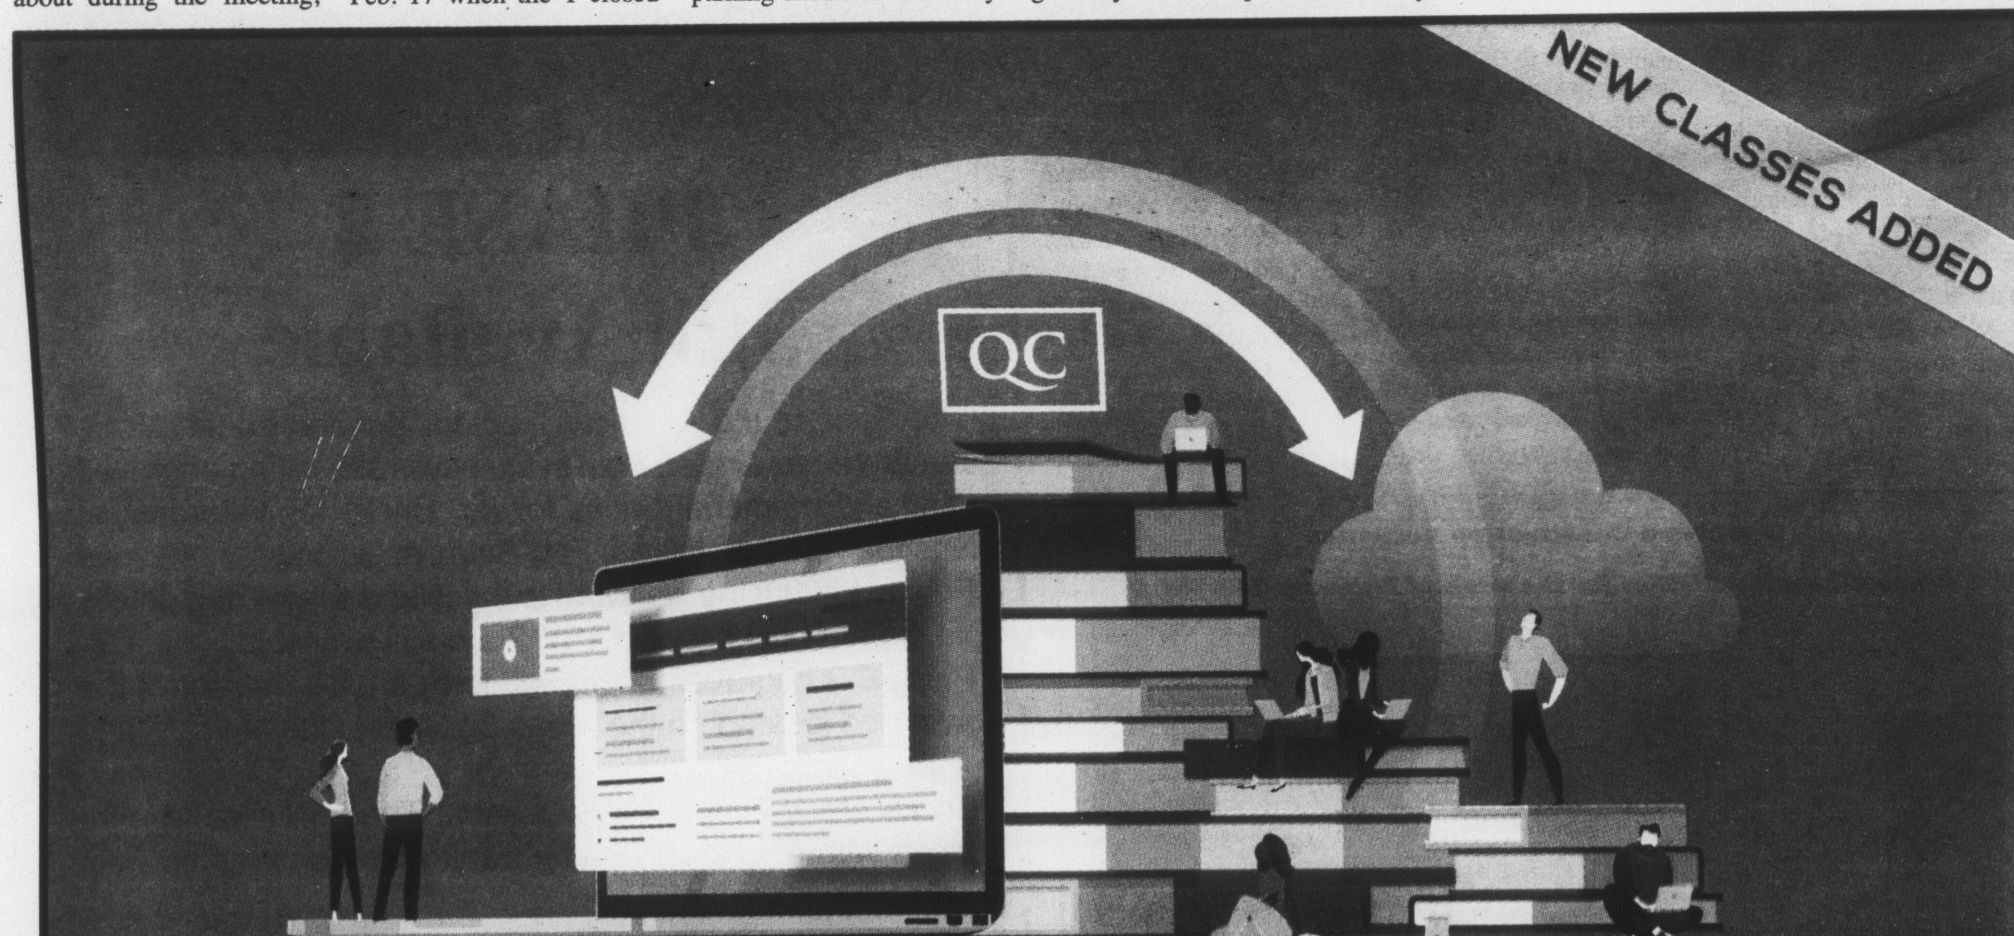

"We do understand our customers' concerns and frankly their frustrations right now. We are looking to do whatever we can to mitigate any of the impact that they are going to have by the loss of spaces during this period during the construction," Gonneville said.

He noted residents can park at Wollaston station and then take a shuttle bus to either North Quincy or Quincy Center. The T cut the price for parking at Wollaston station – where 400 spaces are available – from $5 a day to $2 when the North Quincy work began. Some 600 spaces remain open at North Quincy, including those on the Newport Avenue side of the facility.

Gonneville said the T would monitor the shuttle and take other steps if needed to mitigate the loss of parking.

"We are going to actively monitor what we're doing and the shuttle that we have in place to ensure obviously we are meeting our customer needs," he said. "We certainly understand some of the frustrations of our customers and we're going to do everything we can do mitigate this the best we possibly can during this process."
